ROWLAND SETS DIZZY PACE FOR AIR RACERS

Why Argue?
Sloan and Chrysler.
Wells Fixes Us Up.
A Kind-Hearted Woman.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928.)

IN HIS first address as president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, Sir William Bragg insists that man has a soul. That is like saying there is steam in an engine when it moves, physical life in a man running and talking.

Science cannot PROVE the existence of a soul, but proof isn't necessary.

No man can prove he isn't dreaming as he talks to you, and many a man dreaming has been certain he was awake.

THREE things in the universe, matter, force, spirit. Matter and force may be one. At least they take different forms. Force cannot act without matter. And only spirit CONSCIOUSNESS can supply force to matter and make things better.

The earth was a wilderness, until human beings, each with his spark of consciousness, came to change it.

No "fortuitous concourse of atoms" could produce the left hind leg of a field mouse, much less the brain of Aristotle.

WHEN freedom of the will was discussed, Samuel Johnson said: "Sir, we know the will is free, and there's an end of it."

Men may say "We know that the soul exists, and there's an end of that."

WALTER CHRYSLER, of the Chrysler and Dodge companies, now the biggest independent automobile producer, contributes $25,000 to the Hoover fund.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., head of General Motors, biggest automobile concern in the world, also contributes $25,000 to Hoover. These gifts contain Republican ammunition worth more than $50,000.

Republican spellbinders will ask, "Why do you suppose the biggest automobile men in the world are for Hoover?"

They will answer their question, "Because they want to sell automobiles and know that with Hoover president, people will have money to buy them."

GOV. SMITH'S friends can point to numerous highly prosperous Republicans who have abandoned their party to work for Gov. Smith.

They can say, "Do you think these men would do anything to interfere with prosperity and their prospect of piling more millions on those they already have?"

H. G. WELLS, one of earth's active minds, writes another book, summing up his ideas of what the human race ought to be. Ten years hence he will write another book and sum up otherwise.

Planning to make the human race what it ought to be reminds you of children in the nursery planning what they will do when grown.

They cannot know what they will do or want to do.

H. G. Wells has no clearer conception of men that will live a million years hence than the snail at his feet has of H. G. Wells.

WE shall be WHAT WE GROW TO BE and grow in accordance with the machinery put in us when we were originally wound up.

The three mainsprings are self-preservation, reproduction and ambition, ambition being the desire to OWN and to excel.

Now, self-preservation comes first. Later ambition will come first and self-preservation last.

MRS. JOHN W. MACKAY died on Wednesday at the home of her son, Clarence Mackay, on Long Island.

During her long residence abroad, after the death of her husband, Mrs. Mackay's house, facing the Arc de Triomphe in Paris, and her later residence at Carlton House in London, were centers of intelligence.

She delighted in receiving American friends, and especially in encouraging young Americans abroad. Many, recalling with gratitude her kindness and hospitality, will hear of her death with sorrow.

ALL of the 199 swimmers that started in Mr. Wrigley's marathon swim gave up. The water was too cold.

The swimmers could not go on, with cold water drawing heat and vitality from their bodies with every stroke.

Mothers that send children out in winter with bare legs and arms, girls that go half dressed with temperature below zero, should remember that.

The legs of a child cannot beat the icy winds and cold air of all outdoors. And talk of "hardening the child" is folly.

SOUTHERN Pacific Railroad asks permission to purchase the stock of the North Western Pacific Railroad, operating 473 miles of track, guaranteeing to give "adequate service to the public."

Doubtless that Interstate Commerce Commission will say "yes."

There should be only one railroad system in the United States, as there is only one post office system. And, like the post office, it ought to be operated for the benefit of public, not for private individuals.

The next best thing is to make the companies as big as possible, then watch and regulate them carefully.

BLACKJACK IN CRASHED CAR SPURS PROBE

Extra license plates and a blackjack found in an automobile after it had crashed into a Mt. Lebanon street car in West Liberty avenue today prompted police to an investigation.

Victoria Martin, 18, whose address was given as Seventh and Bedford avenues; Charles Moses, of 207 Bustrick way and Sam Shabal, of New Kensington, occupants of the car were injured. The driver, George Harvey, of 1032 Bustrick way, was not injured and was held in Mt. Washington police station on a suspicious person charge.

The Martin girl was treated at the South Side hospital, then discharged. Moses was treated at the Mercy hospital and released while Shabal was admitted to the Presbyterian hospital. Police are seeking and girl and Moses.

Two Steel Firms to Merge

Rumors that the Vanadium-Alloy Steel Company of Latrobe, would absorb the Colonial Steel Company were confirmed today by Roy C. McKenna, president of the Latrobe company.

The deal for the merger of the two companies, both producers of high-grade tool steel, will be made through a stock transfer, it was understood. Colonial Steel, whose plant is at Monaca, has 3,250,000 outstanding in common stock quoted at slightly under par. Vanadium-Alloys has a valuation of approximately $4,750,000.

Falling Coffin Kills Truck Driver

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—It was a coffin that killed Stanley Gates.

Driving a truck for an undertaker's supply company, Gates was thrown to the ground when his machine and another collided yesterday. A cement coffin box, jarred from his truck, crushed him to death.

DARTS FOR FT. WORTH AHEAD OF DAKE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Earl Rowland, of Wichita, Kan., again set the pace for the Class A transcontinental racers on the Wichita-Oklahoma City leg, bringing his Cessna A monoplane across the finish line at the municipal air field here at 12:47 p. m., Pittsburgh time, today.

DAKE LOSES GROUND

Robert Dake, of Pittsburgh, flying an American Moth, continued to hold second place, landing at 1:13 p. m., Pittsburgh time.

Rowland took off for Fort Worth, the night control point, four minutes after Dake's landing.

ROWLAND SETS PACE

WICHITA, Kan., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Earl Rowland, Wichita pilot, led the Class A fliers in the transcontinental air derby into his home airport here today, landing at 10:35:40 a. m., Pittsburgh time.

Rowland, who has been leading the race since its start at Roosevelt Field, New York, Tuesday, flew his Cessna A monoplane from Kansas City to Wichita in one hour and 56 minutes unofficial time.

Robert Dake, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who took off from Kansas City in his American Moth plane at 7:01 o'clock, landed at 8:50:33. Dake made a rough landing, his plane side-slipping somewhat as it came to earth.

Clear skies greeted the fliers here, but the leaders reported stormy weather this side of Kansas City, and stiff head winds in the higher altitudes.

Unofficially Rowland had increased his margin of lead to 51 minutes and 53 seconds over Dake.

The planes made a 30-minute stop here before taking off for the next stop, Oklahoma City, in today's flight to Fort Worth, the third night control.

Following Rowland and Dake in landing at the Wichita airport, in order of their arrival, were S. L. Wittman, of Byron, Wis., in his Pheasant; Dale G. Jackson, St. Louis, Swallow; Arthur W. Williams, Chicago, Waco; James S.

Bucs Meet Cards in Second

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 7.—A pair of aces, Remy Kremer, of the Pirates, and Jess Haines, of the Cards, will meet on the local mound this afternoon to decide the issue in the second game between the hard-fighting Oaklanders and Skipper Bill McKechnie's league leaders.

Yesterday's battle was all Pittsburgh's until Georgie Harper cracked out a homer in the tenth inning that broke up the game, after the Pirates seemingly had the contest in the bag. The score was 4 to 3.

Burleigh Grimes and Clarence Mitchell were well matched on the mound, and they gave the fans a treat with their spitball exhibition.

Two other homers were registered by Chick Hafey in the fifth, and by Paul Waner in the ninth, with Sprout Waner on the bag.

Explosion Destroys Yacht

The $50,000 yacht Silhouette, owned by J. M. Schoonmaker, Jr., of Pittsburgh, was destroyed yesterday by fire after an explosion aboard the boat in harbor at Coburg, Ont. Mr. and Mrs. Schoonmaker, who have been spending the summer at Coburg, were not on the yacht when the explosion occurred, according to word received here.

Two workmen on the boat were injured. John McGuire, of Coburg, was blown into the water, and suffered a broken arm. Gerald Harris, of Gore's Landing, was burned and cut. Ignition of gasoline fumes was believed to have caused the blast.

INSANITY IS TYRELL'S DEFENSE PLAN

An indication that the defense of Attorney F. J. Tyrrell, who goes on trial Monday charged with murdering Phillip F. Clark, of Homestead, in the First Christian Church of Munhall, will be based on the defendant's sanity was furnished in Criminal Court today, when his counsel asked for and obtained permission to have Tyrrell examined by two physicians.

The petition asked that the physicians be allowed to examine the Munhall lawyer, who is in the county jail, "as to mental and physical condition" for facts which might be used as evidence.

Judge James B. Drew granted an order allowing the examination. It was made clear that the examination was being sponsored by the defense and was not part of the court's conduct.

Clark was slain in the Munhall church on a Sunday morning in May. At the time Tyrell was counsel for Clark's wife in her divorce action.

Girl Leaps From Auto Captors

Leaping from an automobile on the Point Bridge early today when two youthful escorts refused to permit her to leave the car, Laura Davis, 28, of Gironde street, suffered deep lacerations of the head and face. She and Patrick Sampson, 20, of 2728 Penn avenue, and John W. Horne, 20, of 1 Enfield street, alleged to have been her companions, were hailed to Morals Court.

Miss Davis applied at the Allegheny General Hospital for medical aid, saying she had been thrown out of a machine in front of the hospital. She told of having leaped from the car on the bridge and then of having been forced back into the automobile, brought to the hospital and tossed out. After being treated she was arrested on a suspicious person charge.

A motorist who had witnessed the leap onto the bridge obtained the license number of the car and notified the police operator, who in turn broadcast it to all city officers.

This resulted in Motorcycle Patrolman John Bray arresting Sampson and Horne in Penn avenue near Twenty-sixth street. They are charged with being suspicious persons.

Miss Davis said she knew the men and entered their car in Forbes street near Sixth avenue. The men are cab drivers.

TOOK BOTTLED EVIDENCE TO BED, RAIDERS CHARGE

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Sept. 7.—George Sara, of Arnold, concealed a pint bottle of moonshine under his arm and went to bed in effort to secrete evidence, according to county detectives who reported finding mash and a still in another part of the house. Sara was arrested, with five others persons, in a series of raids made yesterday. County Detective Sherman Hill conducted the raids.

ALLIANCE WOMAN DIES; TOOK POISON OVERDOSE

ALLIANCE, O., Sept. 7.—Mrs. Dorothy Taylor, 40, died in the City Hospital yesterday as a result, it is believed, of taking an overdose of drugs Wednesday evening. Coroner T. C. McQuate is investigating.

Herbs Fail

NANCY ANN MILLER

An herb doctor's roots have failed and Nancy Ann Miller, described as pale and listless, lies seriously ill in the castle of her husband, the former Maharajah of Indore, India, at Lucerne, Switzerland, under the care of Swiss physicians. Nancy Ann, who recently startled her friends when she forsook Christianity for Hinduism and an Indian husband, was ill when she arrived at the castle from France.

SET DAPPER INQUEST, LOOK FOR CLUES

The inquest into the slaying of Dr. Harry R. Dapper was set tentatively today for September 18, by Coroner W. J. McGregor.

Henry A. Dapper, father of the slain physician, the only eye-witness, along with officers who have worked on the case and physicians at the Homestead Hospital, where Dr. Dapper died, will be summoned to testify.

County detectives are hopeful that the retelling of the story of the crime by the physician's father and formal examination of those having some knowledge of the circumstances, may uncover a clue. The mysterious slaying has baffled the sleuths since the night of August 20, when Dr. Dapper was shot down by a stranger who had lured him to Mifflin township on a sick call.

"We have solved mysterious murders before and we expect to clear up the Dapper slaying," declared Chief of County Detectives George W. Murren today as he and his men continued their search for a tangible clue.

Chief Murren professed to know nothing of the supposed purchase by Dr. Dapper of quantities of nar-

200 MORE SUBPENAED IN RUM QUIZ

The importance attached by the government to its revival of the grand jury investigation of Pittsburgh's booze ring was set forth clearly today, when it was learned that 200 subpenas are being prepared and served on witnesses who will be trotted before the reconvened grand jury next Monday.

Until today, the impression was that the grand jury was being reassembled to scan the bank accounts of virtually all of the 167 defendants indicted in June.

Now it appears that the jurors will listen to the stories of 200 other witnesses who, United States Attorney John D. Meyer's staff apparently feels, are acquainted with the ramifications of the booze ring whose confessed "slot machine king," Alfred W. Forney, is idling away a six months' sentence in the county jail—first of the 167 to be dealt with.

The feeling in the Federal Building was that after the grand jury has again listened to volumes of testimony it will reindict some of the 167 defendants.

River Race Boat Pilot Missing

GALLIPOLIS, O., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Capt. Elmer Fancher, 57, master of the steamer Betsy Ann, of racing fame, was missing today from the picturesque steamboat. Capt. Fancher, one of the best known Ohio River pilots plying between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, was believed to either have accidentally fallen overboard last night or purposely jumped into the river.

The captain's clothing, money and shoes were found in his stateroom this morning. His home was at Butler, Ky.

PRINCESS MARY LOSES SIX HORSES IN FIRE

LONDON, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Princess Mary today mourned the death of six valuable race horses, burned to death at Goldsborough Hall, the Yorkshire home of the Princess and Viscount Lascelles. The flames, which broke out last night, were prevented from spreading to the royal residence from the stables. The Princess was in the residence at the time.

Falls Into Bison's Pen; Two Hours For Rescue

EBENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 7.—Harry Van Clove, 58, trapping instructor of the State Game Commission, fell 15 feet from a loft in the Sportsman's Building at the Cambria county fair yesterday and landed in a pen occupied by a bison. Two hours were spent in rescuing him.

He was taken to Memorial Hospital, where it was found his left knee and left arm were broken.

HOOVER'S LEAD IN STATE BOOSTED BY RURAL VOTE

Herbert Hoover has increased his lead over Gov. Alfred E. Smith to more than 1,000 with the latest daily returns in the Pennsylvania straw vote canvass of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

A fair Hoover majority in the returns from Philadelphia and better than a 2-to-1 lead in the rural counties caused the Republican candidate's lead in the state totals to date to mount to 1,062, with nearly 15,000 votes cast. Women voters in Philadelphia were strong in support of both candidates.

The poll in Pennsylvania is now extended to approximately one-half the state, including the three largest cities.

Postcard ballots are being distributed to 20 additional rural counties, chiefly in the northern tier and extending from the eastern to the western borders of the state. These counties probably will increase the Hoover totals.

Cards are also being mailed to Scranton, the only second class city in addition to Pittsburgh. Scranton is the center of Lackawanna county, reported to be seething with Smith sentiment.

Distribution of ballots to Philadelphia has been completed.

The Pennsylvania totals to date are: Hoover 7,879, including 4,957 men and 2,922 women; Smith 6,817, including 4,372 men and 2,444 women.

In 1924 this vote was: Coolidge 5,942, 4,137 men and 1,805 women; Davis 1,105, 813 men and 292 women; LaFollette 1,291.

RECKLESS?

Florence was not overly cautious yesterday at that picnic and here she apparently feels the urge.

HOLD TIGHT

Ah, there, Florence! Easy now—that's what comes of a careless inhalation in the country.

THOROUGH

That's it! Have a good one while you're at it. Now is the time for all good 'kerchiefs—

OH!

Oh, Florence! We feel for you! So sorry—know just how you feel. Had it once ourselves!

TRY "THIS!"

Did you every try—? Well, you don't have to fly off the handle just because we're suggesting something. We know it's good—didn't it cure our sister's cousin? And she had it bad—she could hardly sleep at night. All right—don't then.

BOMB RAIDING POLICE CAPTAIN'S HOME

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—The home of Police Capt. Luke Garrick was bombed early today. His wife, who is ill, was thrown from bed. Their 7-month-old granddaughter was buried under eight inches of plaster as she lay in her crib. Damage was placed at $10,000.

The bomb exploded in the vestibule of the Flat building in which the police captain lives.

Neither Mrs Garrick nor her grand daughter were injured seriously, but Mrs. Garrick suffered severely from shock and was taken to a hospital.

Capt. Garrick a few hours earlier had led a raid on the Minerva Athletic club where 64 men were arrested for gambling. He said he believed the bombing was in retaliation for the raid.

The Minerva club raid was executed despite an injunction which forbade police molesting the place. Capt. Garrick obtained new evidence that gambling was going on and then led the raid.

Police had not determined early today whether the dynamite bomb was timed, or had been tossed into the vestibule shortly before it exploded.

CLUB OWNER HELD

Lawrence Mangano, 35, reputed owner of the raided club, was arrested but denied any knowledge of the bombing. He and others arrested in the raid were held for questioning when Capt. Garrick said he was positive the raid was back of the bombing.

John Stege, deputy police commissioner, said he had found witnesses who charged that Mangano had threatened to blow the roof off of Garrick's home soon after the club was raided and Stege said he would charge Mangano with the bombing.

sofics in the few months before his murder.

It was learned at the Federal Building today that a few days after the murder of Dr. Dapper his father turned over to the local government narcotic office the main physician's narcotic form and other records.

William T. Duffy, in charge of the government narcotic office, declined to answer any questions in regard to the matter, explaining that the Harrison act prohibited the disclosure of narcotic records.

County Detectives Frank Ritz and David Carlin said they had checked the "drug fiend" theory thoroughly at the beginning and had found nothing to substantiate it.

Records found in Dr. Dapper's office, disclosed he had issued only two prescriptions for narcotics in his medical career of two years, and two for whisky, they said.

"We checked drug stores," said Ritz, "and could unearth nothing to indicate that Dr. Dapper prescribed drugs except rarely. His slips showed the last narcotic prescription to have been issued by him in May, 1927."

"Dr. Dapper had the reputation among nurses and physicians at St. John's Hospital, where he served as an interne, of being opposed to the use of narcotics," said District Attorney S. H. Gardner. "We have questioned his associates at the hospital on this point."

Gardner and Murren are running down every angle that develops or appears plausible. The theory that Dapper was slain to terrorize his father and other officers of the Fort Pitt Brewing Company is being considered, along with others.

PIPE LINE CUT

RICHARDS AIRFIELD, KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 7.—Leslie C. Miller, of Los Angeles, was put out of the air derby, temporarily at least, when it was discovered today the oil line pipe of his Lincoln-Page engine had been cut.

Miller is at loss to account for the act. He and his mechanics worked on the motor far into the night. Aviation experts declared there was no doubt the pipe, of soft copper, had been cut, as the ends of the break were pinched together as though severed with a pair of pliers.

Samuel H. Turner, Alexandria, Va., piloting a Berliner in the class A race of the national air derby, returned to Richards Field shortly after he had taken off.

Turner got away again at 9:40 a. m., after making repairs on his engine.

Turner said his engine was working badly and he wished to make some repairs before taking off again.

A dozen or more of the pilots were ready when starting time came at 7 a. m. Earl Rowland and Robert Dake took off on scheduled time, but W. N. Emery, Jr., Bradford, Pa., who had been in third place virtually since the start of the race, did not get away until 7:31 a. m., losing 28 minutes which was checked against his flying time. Theodore W. Kenyon, of Boston, who has been fourth, followed Emery off the ground with a loss in time of 27 minutes and 50 seconds. Several others lost several minutes.

Someone stole Tex Rankin's black cat mascot last night and Rankin, who flies plane No. 13, was the victim of a hotel clerk's failure to awaken him this morning. He lost 26 minutes at the start. The black cat was taken from a sedan on the field.

DELAY CLASSES B AND C

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Low visibility and hazardous flying conditions over the Alleghanies in Pennsylvania caused another postponement of the Class B and Class C races in the New York-Los Angeles air derby today.

The 20 planes of the B Class and four in Class C will take off at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning if the weather permits.

DEMAND HILL CLEANUP

Promotion of two NeNgro patrolmen to lieutenants and their assignment to the Hill district, a vigorous campaign against law violators in that district, and transfer of Engine Company No. 28, a Negro company, to Engine House No. 26, Webster avenue and Wandless street, was demanded today in a petition to Mayor Kline and Director of Public Safety James M. Clark, by officers of the Afro-American Brotherhood of the World. They declared that lawlessness was "reigning uncurbed" in the Hill district and asked that better police protection be given the district's residents immediately.

SIXTH ST. SPAN OPEN SEPT. 15

Pedestrians will be permitted to use the Sixth Street Bridge on September 15, when the west sidewalk will be thrown open. The east sidewalk will be completed a short time later. The Chamber of Commerce will be in charge of the bridge-opening celebration, which will be in the form of a tri-span dedication for the Sixth, Seventh and Ninth street bridges.

JOHN PASSES UP SHOP FOR JOB WITH RAILROAD

SUPERIOR, Wis., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—John Coolidge expects to go into the railroad business, making his start in the freight department of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, it was learned today.

Although President Coolidge's son has not as yet closed with any definite position, it is understood that he has made up his mind to take up such a job unless unforseen circumstances should arise. He expects to be stationed in Hartford, Conn.

The possibility of his taking such a position, it is reported, was first discussed this summer when Thomas Cochran, a partner in the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., and an old friend of the Chief Executive, came to spend a night at Cedar Island lodge. Mr. Cochran, who is also a director in the railroad in question, suggested, it is understood, that John take such a position.

DERBY FLIERS IN U.S. EXPOSITION

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Final plans for the 1928 national air races, described by Clarence M. Young, director of aeronautics for the department of commerce, as the greatest aviation exhibition in history, were being rushed toward completion here today. The races begin tomorrow after the arrival of various groups of planes now headed westward.

On a given signal tomorrow, 300 airplanes will roar out from Mines Field to mark the exposition opening. Then their pilots will mass into formation to fly out over the countryside in ag reat demonstration.

The exposition will continue nine days. Thus far 216 flyers have entered the races, 62 of whom were in the trans-continental derbies and 11 in the non-stop flight from New York.

Homes of 3 Wealthy Guarded

International News Service.

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 7.—Officers armed with sawed off shot guns and machine guns today are guarding the palatial residences of three prominent Peoria citizens to ward o ff threatened invasions of gangsters.

Two men recently approached a chauffeur employed by Charles S. Jones, a broker, and offered him a bribe and threatened death unless he surrendered a key to his employer's cellar.

Similar threats were made to employes of Garett Kinney, state treasurer, and Deloss Brown, another wealthy Peorian.

The chauffeur, fearing execution of the death threat, refused to reveal the identity of the men, but he admitted that he could identify them. Meantime the chauffeur, as well as the Jones family, departed for a northern resort.

One arrest has been made. Frank Lee, a former yard man employed at one of the homes, was taken in custody and is being held by the police for further questioning. The authorities claim that Lee's association with two characters listed on police records as hijackers strengthens the suspicion against him. Police are seeking the other men.

Meantime, Peoria's finest residential section presents an up-to-the-minute arsenal for machine guns and other huge firearms. The weapons have been planted in various spots around the three guarded homes, prepared to stave off any attack that may be waged by gangsters supposed to have approached the chauffeur.

MATE THREATENED LIFE, RUTH ELDER CHARGES

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 7.—When Ruth Elder began her airplane flight to Europe—one that ended in mid-ocean—a double specter of death was hovering over her, she declared here today.

One, obviously, was death at sea, in the event of a disastrous crash; the other, she asserted, was at the hands of her husband, Lyle Womack, who threatened to kill her if she did not agree to give up the flight.

This startling assertion was made by the famous aviatrix as the aftermath of divorce proceedings instituted by Womack, now at Balboa, Canal Zone.

HUSBAND WALKS IN

Her husband, she said, threatened her life in New York.

"George Haldeman and two others interested in the flight were discussing plans in my suite on this night," she asserted. "Suddenly Lyle stalked into the room and asked to talk with me privately. We went into another apartment.

"He began to abuse me. He was making so much noise that I went toward the door to close the transom. He thought I was going out. He threw me on the bed and placed his hand on my throat. He said: 'I'll kill you and kill Haldeman and I'll kill those others up there if you won't agree to give up the flight.'"

Miss Elder said she finally managed to get to the telephone and call Haldeman and his companion. They came to the apartment and finally quieted her husband, she asserted.

BLAMES KISS DODGING

BALBOA, Canal Zone, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Lyle Womack hopes to obtain an interlocutory decree of divorce in December from Ruth Elder, who "chose a career rather than be a housewife."

Her failure to kiss him upon her return to New York after almost flying across the Atlantic is cited in his petition for divorce as a cause of much embarrassment. He charges that at that time she said to him in an undertone:

"Don't be a fool."

In a statement after the petition was filed Womack said:

"I would be delighted if she would return to me. But I begged her many times and she always refused. Nothing would have delighted me more than to love her dearly, but now I see there is nothing else to be done than that which I am doing.

"Ruth chose a career rather than be a housewife, and I have no other course."

LAST TIME

For the last time, Civil War veterans of the National Encampment of Union Veteran Legion and of the Seventy-eighth Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, have met, in Pittsburgh. Here are Christian Lampe, 91, and Maj. A. B. Hay, 83, leaders.

NATIONAL

From all over the nation came these veterans to Soldiers' Memorial Hall for their final reunion. Many will never see former comrades again. They are (front) P. F. Bankert, S. M. Evans, James Colwell, T. E. Morgan, W. P. Griffith, John Renton, John A. Reed, David Lindsay, J. A. McDowell, C. Herchberger, Henry Garrett, (rear) M. Poetmichael, T. J. Arnold, W. C. Cook, R. S. Westbrook, B. F. Johnston, Christian Lampe, B. F. Johnson, Samuel McClain, J. W. Ross and D. M. Osyor.

DISBAND

Both organizations literally have disbanded with these final meetings here. These are members of the Seventy-eighth Regiment: J. W. Ross, Raymond Eastly, J. D. Murphy and J. M. Hawk. For the last time, they have fought again those old battles.

PENNSYLVANIANS

These are also members of that famed old Pennsylvania regiment, the Seventy-eighth. They are Maj. Hay, C. Hinchberger, S. R. Steele, H. E. Yingst and George McCracken, just before they parted after their last organized "rally 'round-the-flag." The ranks thin out even more rapidly than ever.

POISON ALCOHOL CAR LOST; FEAR DEATHS

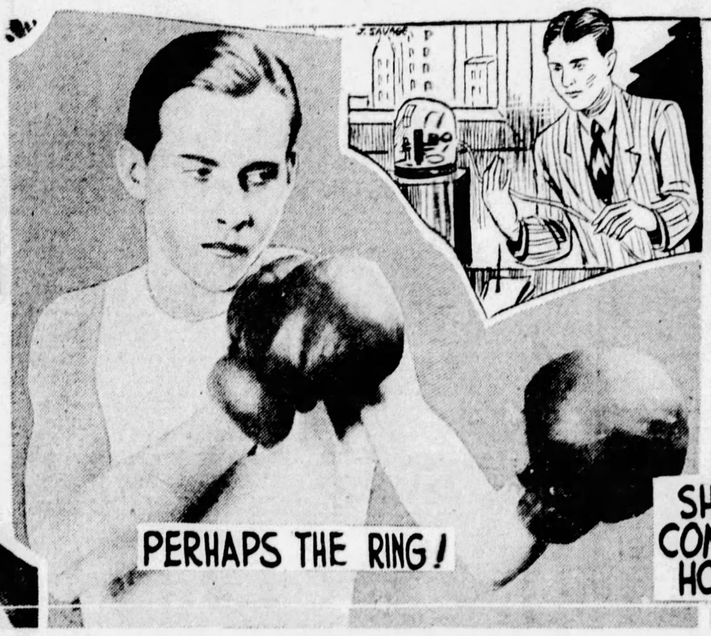
John Job Hunting -:- What in the World IS He Going to Do? -:- Florence Coming Home

FREE

John Coolidge—the President's son—has now that untrammeled freedom that means he must get out and find a position, or, if necessary, a job. What'll he do?

WELL?

He won't marry Florence Trumbull, Massachusetts' Governor's daughter, now, he says as he visits his grandmother, ill, in Northampton, Mass. John could, they say, play in an orchestra.



COLLEGIAN

As a collegian, John boxed—just a little bit; don't you remember? Perhaps, in a pinch, if, say, he had a wife to support and had no job, he could, mind you, go into the fight ring! But hardly.

FLORENCE

While he comforts his grandmother, John waits for Florence, bound over the high seas from Europe to her home. She'll arrive, perhaps, Monday.

POISON ALCOHOL CAR LOST; FEAR DEATHS

OLD FORGE, Pa., Sept. 7.—Grave possibility of an epidemic of alcohol poisoning somewhere in the United States was feared today when police learned that a car of poisoned alcohol, which caused two deaths, two cases of blindness and 155 serious illnesses here had disappeared completely.

Early this week a Jersey Central freight railroad car was shunted onto the Ontario and Western siding here. A group of 11 small boys used it to play "railroad." One discovered the tap on the tank car open.

One whiff of the contents and the 11 boys became business men. There was no mistaking the alcoholic odor.

At prices which would make bootleggers shudder, the boys sold milk bottle after milk bottle of the alcohol. Twenty-five and 50 cents was the ordinary price and Old Forge drinkers laid in a supply for cocktails.

Among those who purchased the alcohol and drank were Aleck Hydrallck and Andrew Govel. They died a few hours later.

George Machick drank a concoction whose base was made up of the alcohol and went blind. Mrs. Mary Knopp was partly blinded.

Then came reports from all parts of the city of strange sudden illnesses. Physicians traced all the cases, numbering 155, to the alcohol.

Peace officers descended to where the car had been on the siding. But between the time of the alarm and the time the police arrived, the car had been put back on the main line and taken away.

There was no record here to whom and where the car had been consigned and there was little chance to trace it. Authorities believed the car contained a poisonous alcohol known as "number six", which contains a great quantity of wood alcohol and that it was being shipped to a bootleg distillery for redistillation.

Inasmuch as owners of the alcohol can not be found there was no prosecution on that score, and no one in Old Forge wanted to prosecute the 11 boys who discovered the car. None of the 155 made ill was in serious condition today.

SHOCK BRINGS DEATH IN DENTIST'S CHAIR

FORD CITY, Pa., Sept. 7.—That death came as the result of shock was the decision of Coroner Dosch, who investigated the death of Hannah Mary Blaney, 13, in a dentist's chair a few days ago. The coroner exonerated Dr. Hugh Cochran, dentist, and his assistant, Dr. Girath, to whom the girl had gone to have some teeth extracted.

HORSES FAST DISAPPEARING TRAFFIC CHECK SHOWS

Indications that the horse-drawn vehicle is slowly but surely being eliminated from the streets of Pittsburgh is given in the release of figures on traffic amassed by the Boy Scouts for the Bureau of Traffic Planning and Better Traffic Committee in the city-wide traffic check taken May 24. Comparison with the check taken a year previously shows that 156 less horse-drawn vehicles were using the streets on that day than the day when the previous check was taken, a decrease of 8.2 per cent.

In contrast to the decrease in horse-drawn vehicles is the rapid increase in buses during the same period, the gain in the latter representing 80.5 per cent. In striking contrast to the 504 buses which plied the city streets in April, 1927, the Scouts checked in 909 buses on May 24 in the period from 7:30 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Figures revealed by the check which shows the vehicles entering and leaving the downtown section over the 13 "throats" shows an 8.8 per cent increase for all types of vehicles.

Passenger automobiles again led the list of those using the streets, there having been 70,940 of such vehicles, or 63.1 per cent of the total, with trucks numbering 24,468, or 21.5 per cent of those using the streets. Street cars totaled 8.4 per cent, taxis 3.8 per cent, horse-drawn 1.5 per cent, special .9 per cent and buses .8 per cent.

Of the 13 throats, the heaviest traveled was that of Seventh avenue and the Bigelow boulevard. This was caused by the fact that repairs on the Boulevard of the Allies caused many to use the older traffic artery to and from the East End residential section.

The low, yesterday, over the Canadian Northwest, has advanced eastward to Manitoba, 29.62 at Minnedosa, developing southward at the same time into the western plains.

Rain is falling in Eastern Pennsylvania and Georgia this morning, and rain fell in the last 24 hours in the Middle and South Atlantic and East Gulf states. Scattered showers occurred in the Canadian Northwest, North Dakota, Kansas and Missouri. Weather is generally fair in the lake region, the central valleys and most of the Far West.

Temperatures have risen in the Dakotas and southward to Colorado, while it is cooler in the Northwest; elsewhere there was little change in temperature.

River Conditions.

Rainfall over the rivers was light in the last 24 hours and there was no appreciable change in the river stages. Stage at Pittsburgh is 10.3; Dam No. 2, 8.5, and Dam No. 6, 7.5 feet. The dams are up. The rivers will change but little.

THAW STOPS HERE ON WAY TO START OFF IN AIR RACE

Heading for New York, where they are scheduled to enter in the non-stop division of the transcontinental air races, Col. Wiliam Thaw and Capt. John P. Morris, arrived at Rodgers Field last night from San Diego, Cal. The two flew here in Thaw's new Lockheed-Vega monoplane which will be entered in the race. Both men are Pittsburghers, Thaw being a member of the famous Lafayette escadrill.

Morris is scheduled to pilot the ship in the race and Thaw will accompany him as navigator. It is the only Pittsburgh entry in the non-stop race and the local men will compete with some of the world's leading fliers, including Art Goebel, who last month shattered all records for a non-stop flight across the continent.

Prisoners Protest Sunday March To Church

MILLERSBURG, O., Sept. 7.—Prisoners in the Holmes county jail are protesting against the recent order of Sheriff J. V. Gray which forces them to attend church services in town on the Sabbath.

They contend that they are humiliated by the stares of the worshipers.

Sheriff Gray contends the townspeople have a right to know what a jail inmate looks like.

WIFE ASSERTS CARNES BLACKMAILERS' VICTIM

International News Service.

ATLANTA, Sept. 7.—Belief that her husband was the victim of blackmailers was expressed today by Mrs. Clinton S. Carnes, wife of the missing treasurer of the home mission board of the Southern Baptist Church. He disappeared August 15.

Through her youngest son, Robert, the wife declared the situation, whereby the board faces a possible shortage of $1,000,000 was brought about by persons who knew of Carnes' prison record. He had guarded his past from the public.

Mrs. Carnes believes her husband was forced to pay huge amounts and when faced with ruin and threatened with disgrace, he fled.

Possible grand jury investigation of the affair of Carnes, whose accounts are said to indicate a shortage of approximately $1,000,000, was discussed by authorities here today.

During the day, Judge John B. Hutcheson, of the DeKalb county Superior Court, appointed receivers for all of Carnes' personal property, including his private business enterprises, his home and other assets, with a view toward making restitution to the mission board for the alleged shortage.

The missing treasurer's personal assets have been estimated at between $200,000 and $300,000.

200 PUPILS IN ONE CITY SCHOOL HAVE NO DESKS

"This year Pittsburgh has a seat and a full day's schooling for every pupil," said Dr. George W. Gerwig, secretary of the board of education, as the city schools opened Tuesday. But—

Brookline residents today found a large flaw in the rosy picture of Pittsburgh school facilities. In Brookline, they asserted, many pupils are not enjoying the advantages claimed for them.

The parents' protest is well groudned, Professor J. F. Moore, principal of the Brookline and West Liberty schools, admitted. There are 200 children getting only part-time schooling in the Brookline district.

This part-time instruction is confined to pupils in the first three grades, according to Prof. Moore. The average time spent in academic instruction each day by the lower grade pupils is five hours and five minutes. The part-time pupils are getting three hours and 30 minutes in class rooms each day.

The congestion in Brookline will continue until the completion of an annex on which work has just begun. That will mean no change in the situation until next year, according to officials in the school building department, who said the annex would not be ready for use until September, 1929.

"In handling the part-time pupils we pare the curriculum down to the fundamentals," said Prof. Moore. "We eliminate such things as art, music and craft training, which are called 'curriculum enrichment,' and confine instruction to the three R's.

"The situation, however, is no cause for alarm. It has been proven that pupils on part-time instruction are not noticeably backward after three years of being restored to full time."

Dr. Gerwig had two answers for the Brookline critics.

First—"You can't ever make a general statement that someone won't find an exception to.

Second—"There are enough seats in the city for every pupil enrolled. But readjustments are necessary. We have opened a number of new school buildings this year, and many transfers will be necessary before all our facilities can be brought into play. That will take time. Meanwhile, there is some congestion. You can't take pupils, for instance, from Central High School and send them to Spring Hill.

"Those Brookline people really haven't any kick coming. That Brookline additon was contracted for and started in the fastest time of any school project ever undertaken in the city. It will be finished as soon as possible.

"Two hundred children is a very small percentage of our enrollment. Just compare Pittsburgh with New York, where 70,000 children are on part time; and with Philadelphia, where there are 20,000 on part time."

POLL PROVES G. O. P. STRENGTH, GOOD ASSERTS

UNUSUAL VOTE BY WOMEN IS SEEN

By JAMES W. GOOD,
Manager, Western Headquarters, Republican National Committee, Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—As the straw vote of the Hearst newspapers day by day becomes an increasingly satisfactory reflection of opinion in all parts of the country, it is being followed, and will continue to be followed, with increasing interest by everybody concerned about the progress of the campaign.

Already it indicates that the confidence of Republicans in the outcome at the polls is thoroughly justified.

A study of the figures from the states of the Corn Belt shows that in this normally Republican territory there is no such defection from the Republican standard as has been pictured by our opponents. That great territory, always conceded to be almost certain to determine the outcome of national elections, has been Republican in the past and is shown to be Republican now.

Only in 1912, when the Republicans were hopelessly divided, has the Republican party failed to carry this great agricultural region.

Lost by Split Vote

In 1916, if results had been dependent upon this territory, the Republicans would have elected Mr. Hughes overwhelmingly.

It was Republican division that lost the election in 1912; and there is no division this year. It was defection in the Pacific and mountain states that made Mr. Wilson's election in 1916 possible. There will be no such defection this year.

The Hearst newspaper statistics conclusively demonstrate that the revolt against Tammany's Democratic ticket in the South is more serious than the Democrats have admitted; more serious in fact than many Republicans have dared to hope, until these figures were made available.

That the Democrats regard the Southern situation as very threatening to them is conclusively shown by the fact that their candidate for vice president, Senator Robinson, is opening his campaign in the South.

This is something without precedent, and is a complete confession that even in the stronghold of Democracy the situation is thoroughly bad for the party.

In the border states the figures show a strong trend toward the Republicans, confirming all reports that come from Republican advisers in these states.

Women Unbossed

Again, the figures make it plain that the woman's vote this year will be larger than ever before, and that it will not parallel the vote of the men. The women, both North and South, are plainly going to cast a larger proportion of the vote than ever before; and they are going to vote their own convictions, not those of their relatives among the men.

This means, as again the figures indubitably prove, that the Republicans will be greatly strengthened in this direction.

It is only necessary to study the tabulation of figures to be convinced that several states which Mr. Roskob claims for the Democrats, some of which might reasonably be regarded as possibly doubtful, are quite certain to go Republican because of Mr. Hoovers' great strength with the women voters.

THE topsy turvy tastes of the tall and short tickle me!

A tall girl may pack her wardrobe in a tack box, but a short girl needs a truck for all parapharnalia that delights her.

I know a tall girl who has a hat box full of beads, bracelets and earrings, given to her because she is just the type that can wear them. But she sticks to a string to seed pearls you can hardly see!

I know a short girl who persists in wearing hats like parasols. She has walked a block with the wrong man in a gray suit without discovering her mistake.

Most short girls want to dress like sirens. Towering girls want to dress like baby dolls!

M'BRIDE CALLS RELIGION TALK WETS' TRICK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—The charge that the Anti-Saloon League is opposing Gov. Smith, the Democratic presidential nominee on account of his religion," is declared to be "absolutely false" in a statement issued here by F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the league.

The league, he said, repeatedly has supported "dry Catholics when their opponents were wet Protestants."

He added that the league would have supported "the dry Catholic instead of the wet Protestant," if the Democrats had nominated "Senator Thomas Walsh of Montana, or Col. Patrick Henry Callahan, of Kentucky," and the Republicans had selected "Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, or former Senator Wadsworth of New York."

He charged that the Smith supporters had raised the religious issue and not the drys.

"The apparent purpose of the Smith forces is to win," he declared, "with a campaign for religious liberty those voters whom they could not hope to win on the real issue which is enforcement.

ANONYMOUS GIFT SENDS MILK-ICE FUND TO $2,154

A gift of $5 from an anonymous donor, "H. C.," brings the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Milk and Ice Fund up to $2,154.67 today.

The association is under extra expense these days, for this sudden change from extremely warm to unseasonably cool weather has occasioned a considerable amount of sickness among the 300 little charges and medicine must be paid for in addition to the usual expenditures.

Those people who think a large proportion of the fund goes for overhead expenses should at once be disabused of this idea. The least expense of the organization is its overhead and the greatest is the certified milk with which it supplies the 300 babies in its care. A few parents are able to pay in part for the milk delivered to their little ones, but this number is so small that it is negligible. The fund today:

How to Keep Well

Don't Worry About High Blood Pressure

DR. COPELAND

HERE comes a letter from Florida, asking for an article on high blood pressure. This is one of the permanent symptoms of worry. Nobody can long resist the evil effects of steady worry. Sometimes high blood pressure is one of its chief effects.

Then, when there is added to the original cause of worry the fear of high blood pressure, we are dealing with a bad combination. Unfortunately, there is widespread anxiety over this symptom. Too many persons have come to believe that it leads to other diseases and, on the whole, it leads to unhappiness. So everybody dreads it.

Hardening of the arteries is one of the most important causes for increased blood pressure. Of this condition a great doctor has said it is "like gray hair, with which, but not because of which, we die."

If you will remember this, you will have no terror of hardened arteries and high blood pressure. They are merely symptoms of advancing years, just as gray hair is.

Of course, hardened arteries and high blood pressure may become the cause of disease, and more or less serious trouble. It depends on what part or organ of the body becomes affected.

But nature is kind. Almost always she gives us warning by sending a mild attack or two before there is any real menace to life or usefulness. Many a person has had hardened arteries and high blood pressure for 50 years and never suffered a single moment because of them.

Diet of the wrong sort may be a factor in the production of hardened arteries. Great eaters not only of meat, but of all other foods are apt to have this trouble. This is particularly true if obstinate and chronic constipation exists.

If a careful physical examination shows that the blood vessels of the brain, heart, or kidneys are hardened and at the same time the blood pressure is unduly high, it is well to be careful. You should lead such a life as not to throw sudden strain upon the vessels which might break. Under such circumstances gentle exercise, the avoidance of violent outbursts of anger and other emotions, temperance in eating and drinking, are indicated. Over-exertion, fatigue worry and loss of sleep are to be avoided.

KEYNOTER SPLITS WITH HOOVER ON DRY PROBLEM

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—The keynoter of the Connecticut Republican state convention disagrees with Herbert Hoover on prohibition.

Congressman Schuyler Merritt, of Stamford, said in a convention speech last night:

"I do not agree with Mr. Hoover because, in my opinion, special social legislation should have no place in the Constitution."

Merritt said he felt prohibition had not worked out well, but added "its abandonment must be left to further experience and to public opinion." He said he hoped a "searching investigation of facts and causes of the abuses will develop means for carrying on this great experiment without disregarding other and more basic sections of the Constitution, such for example, as the Fourth Amendment."

Gov. Smith's observations on prohibition, Merritt said, "are interesting," but so far as having any effect on prohibition and the Eighteenth Amendment, "he might as well discourse on astronomy or any abstract question."

Mrs. A. J. Dougherty, 58, wife of A. J. Dougherty, died yesterday at her home, 922 Parkman avenue. She was a lifelong resident of Pittsburgh and a member of St. Paul's Cathedral. She leaves two daughters.

MIND TEST ASKED FOR BOY SLAYER SUSPECT

Asserting Michael Ferrero, Jr., is insane and not responsible for the murder with which he is charged, Attorney Louis Little filed a petition in Criminal Court yesterday asking an examination into the youth's mental condition. Ferrero, with three other boys, is in jail awaiting trial for the death of Michael Flinn, a watchman, in Center avenue, almost a year ago. The petition, signed by Michael Ferrero, Sr., asks that Dr. C. C. Wholey and Dr. S. H. Ralston be given permission to examine the boy and report to the court.

CITES FILM PLOT

BLAMES AGENTS FOR THEATER'S NON-SUPPLY

Judge George V. Moore of Common Pleas Court has granted H. E. Hammond of Erie, trading as the Lyric Amusement Company of 548 West Eighteenth street, a temporary injunction restraining certain picture concerns from suspending service to his theater, owing to a dispute.

The concerns enjoined from suspending service, blacklisting or boycotting the plaintiff or preventing others to do so, include the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributors, Columbia Pictures Corp., F. B. O. Pictures Corp., Pathe Exchange, Inc., Fox Film Corp., The Vitagraph, otherwise known as Warner Bros., and the Standard Film Service Corp.

Hammond claims that the original dispute arose between himself and the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation regarding a contract, when he refused to arbitrate the dispute as required in the contract. He was directed to pay a cash award but refused, claiming it was illegal.

The other film corporations named in the proceedings then demanded the posting of $785 to protect them on future pictures and he refused to do so and service was suspended.

The preliminary injunction obtained by Attorney Oliver K. Eaton also enjoins the Pittsburgh Film Board of Trade from continuing to carry on an alleged illegal agreement of conspiracy, so far as compelling arbitration is concerned. Bond was fixed at $2,500 and the hearing set for September 13. Attorney John G. Frazer represents all of the defendants.

BUGS BAER Says

PHILADELPHIA is 90 miles away from New York.

And 18 amendments away from Washington.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

It seems incredible that the Quaker City supports 13,000 speakeasies.

We thought it was more.

Mayor Mackey ordered the police to clean up the town in 24 hours or turn in their uniforms.

Which means that the Mayor is going into the second-hand clothing business.

Mackey is too sudden with his statistics.

Gen. Smedley Butler, of the non-resident Marines, allowed a year for the same job.

And Smedley's first stop was Shanghai.

Mackey has not yet named his itinerary.

Can you visualize 13,000 speakeasies all murmuring sweet and low?

There are only 86,000 seconds in a day. That means a speakeasy must be closed every seven seconds in order to compete with reformed arithmetic.

We hope the police do not bang those 13,000 doors. It's very annoying.

It can't be done. It would be a week's job for a Kansas tornado.

Why not take it easy and close 11,000 the first day?

It's a staggering total. No wonder it's the City of Brotherly Love.

Just think of 13,000 wobble garages in one town.

And then think that the government pays men in Washington to measure the rainfall.

It was too much for Smedley Butler. He had plenty of authority. But no place to unload it.

The general was glad to get back into the Army where orders ain't movie titles.

He is glad to be in Hong Kong in spite of the fact that he has to ask 240,000,000 Chinamen, "Who's got my laundry?"

65,000 REGISTRATION SETS RECORD

BIGGEST CROWDS STORM CITY POLLS ON FIRST DAY

The registration in Pittsburgh yesterday broke all existing records.

Judging from incomplete returns from all parts of the city, 65,000 men and women qualified to vote in November, 30,000 more than registered four years ago.

The registration was overwhelmingly Republican as usual, although that fact means little so far as the presidential contest is concerned.

Some of those who registered in the G. O. P. column did so with their eyes on future political contests, especially the mayoralty next year, although intending to support Gov. Alfred E. Smith in November.

In district after district reporting, the first day's registration reached the total vote cast in other years.

The unprecedented rush yesterday, coming after the record jam that sought to be assessed and pay taxes during the last few days, strengthened those who have expressed the opinion that Pittsburgh's vote this year will reach the high water mark.

Both parties this morning claimed to have secured the advantages from yesterday's high registration.

There is one fact, however, that sticks out like a sore thumb. The record total was reached without the help of the Republican organization, which did practically nothing to get its followers to the polling places.

According to reports today, the organization expects to put its big registration across on the last day, October 6. The second registration day is September 18.

The 65,000 total is based on an estimate taken from returns from 60 well-scattered districts. These averaged 89 votes to the precinct. If that ratio holds good there will be in the 726 city precincts 64,614 registrations.

INJURED BY AUTO, WOMAN, 81, SUCCUMBS

Injured a week ago in an automobile accident, Eva Steele, 81, of 3155 Mount Hope road, died early today in St. John's Hospital. The report to the coroner's office did not give any details of the accident and the nature of the woman's injuries.

CO-ED INRUSH DRIVING MEN AWAY, SCHOOL HEAD SAYS

CHICAGO, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Co-eds at Northwestern University are driving young men away from the institution, it was admitted today by President Walter Dill Scott.

The situation has become so serious that Presidenht Scott announced that hereafter only women ranking in the upper one-fourth of their high school classes would be allowed to apply for admittance.

Further regulation provides they must live either at home or in a dormitory.

Trustees want to keep the university co-educational, but they say men won't attend a "women's school."

President Scott said the university desires to admit 450 men to every 333 women.

Entrance of undergraduates into professional schools is basically responsible for the situation, he added.

¶ Neither great men nor great products require a long story about their virtues. ¶ Their very manner of existence and daily accomplishments tell all that the onlooker needs for appreciation and endorsement. ¶ Certain automobiles, for example, have won such confidence that no high-pressure selling is required. Their makers know that all the world would own them. ¶ And so with Kolster Radio. Such faithfulness in tone quality, such extraordinary selectivity and such distinguished appearance have created, by their presence in thousands of homes in every State in the Union, a powerful structure of confidence within the public mind. ¶ Glowing praise is irrelevant when this exists. It is enough to hear on all sides the quiet remark:

"Kolster is a fine set"

UP IN THE AIR

RADIO SINGER

When Ruth Williams, soprano, sings for listeners to stations of the NBC system, she's "up in the air." Not mentally, or in an airplane, but from a studio on top of the Park Central Hotel, New York, a structure 31 stories high. The singer is heard in broadcasts several times weekly.

WHAT'S ON THE AIR

A PROGRAM of unusual interest, presenting some of the foremost vocal and instrumental artists on the air, will be offered as the regular National Broadcasting and Concert Bureau hour through the NBC System, including WCAE, at 10:30 o'clock tonight. The artists are those who will begin a nation-wide tour in the fall as "Group A," and who take this unusual means of giving a preliminary performance through a wide network of radio stations. The program features the National Light Opera quartet, composed of Edwin Delbridge, Leon Salathiel, Marjorie Horton and Mary Hopple; Graham McNamee, NBC announcer and concert baritone; Katherine Tift-Jones, a radio personality of unusual magnetism; Georgia Price, harpist; Arcadie Birkenholz, violin virtuoso, and Mathilde Harding, concert pianist.

"Oh, Dem Golden Slippers," a Negro spiritual, will be among the numbers sung by the Stromberg-Carlsons during the program to be heard through KDKA at 10:39 o'clock.

Robert Stevens, tenor of the Cities Service Cavaliers, will go before the microphone with Kramer's "The Last Hour" in the Cities Service hour to be broadcast over WCAE at 8:00 o'clock. The orchestra will play gems from Victor Herbert's "Her Regiment," and "Deep in My Heart," from Sigmond Romberg's popular operetta, "The Student Prince."

Milady's Musicians will play an old French gavotte, in the arrangement of Campra, as the opening number of the program to be broadcast through the NCB system, including KDKA, at 8 o'clock.

Vocal and instrumental soloists will be a feature of the Wrigley Review to be heard through KDKA at 9 o'clock. "The Viking Song" will be presented as the opening number of the program by the entire ensemble.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

September Surely "Month of Roses" With Many Dates Set for Weddings and Some Already Solemnized

IT DOESN'T seem possible, does it, that just a week or two ago there was nothing to talk about but what society folks were doing at summer resorts? Just a few days, ushering in a new season, can surely alter the aspect of news. No sooner had September made its bow than folks began to talk of weddings and to plan entertainments for fall brides. This will surely be a month of brides. Of course dates for some have been set for several months, but others are very much news to us all.

One marriage that I'm sure you'll be interested in is that of Mrs. Dorothy Willock Verner. Her parents, the Harry H. Willocks, of the Schenley apartments, announce her marriage to E. C. Brainerd, also of the Schenley apartments. The ceremony, a simple one, took place last evening at 5:30 o'clock.

ONE of the much feted brides of early fall is Pauline Page, daughter of the George Stevens Pages, of Thomas boulevard. And her marriage to Lesslie Stockton Howell, son of the C. H. S. Howells, of Haverford, will be one of the most important weddings of the season, both in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

I told you yesterday, I believe, that Mrs. A. Cameron Mann, of Negley avenue, gave a bridge for Pauline, on Wednesday. Yesterday Mrs. Horace Cook entertained at a bridge in her home on Raleigh street.

Next week there will be even more entertainments for her. On Wednesday Elizabeth Keith will give a bridge luncheon in her home on Kentucky avenue, and next Thursday Mrs. William Harman will entertain with another bridge.

All the members of the bridal party, the best man and ushers as well as Pauline's attendants will be guests at a buffet luncheon Elizabeth Cornelius, of Darlington road, will give in her home.

Mrs. Charles E. Dinkey, of Sheridan avenue, Pauline's cousin, will give the rehearsal dinner next Friday evening in the Pittsburgh Country Club.

DOROTHY ISABEL BAILEY, daughter of the George Hobard Baileys, of Dunmoyle place, became the bride of Kenneth V. Hughes, son of Mrs. Joseph Hughes, of Anderson, Ind., last evening at 7:30 o'clock in the home of her parents. The Rev. Dr. Robert Meade, of the Church of the Redeemer, was the officiant.

Fall flowers in brilliant hues against a background of palms and cibotium ferns were used in decorating the living room where the ceremony was performed.

The bride wore a white satin gown, fashioned with an uneven hemline and a court train hanging from the shoulders and trimmed with rose pointe lace. Her veil of tulle was scattered with orange blossoms, and she carried lilies.

Katherine Blount, of Brooklyn, as maid of honor, and Mrs. Wendell Walter Lusk, who was Martha Lobingier, and Helen Hawman and Josephine Moseley, who were bridesmaids, wore similar gowns of green crepe satin, trimmed with girdles of rhinestones, and carried arm bouquets of dahlias.

George H. McChesney was best man, and James A. Bailey, brother of the bride, and William Gide, of Dallas, Tex., were ushers.

The mother of the bride wore grey chiffon and lace, and the mother of the bridegroom black chiffon and lace. Both had corsages of orchids.

A wedding dinner and reception followed. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes left for Bermuda, and will be at home after October 1 on Woodwell street.

MRS. HARRIET RAHN, of Marie avenue, Avalon, has announced the marriage of her daughter, Miss Emily Rahn, and Leo Ward Shultz, of Mansfield, O., which was solemnized Saturday. After October 15 Mr. and Mrs. Shultz will be at home in Avalon.

CHILDREN of the primary department of the Franklin Methodist Episcopal Community Sunday School will give an entertainment, "A Fairyland Garden," tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock on the lawn of Mrs. W. P. Craft's home in Franklin road, Ingomar. Miss Truth Crawford, one of the teachers of the department, wrote the play, which combines pantomime with music and dancing, and the proceeds will be used to pay for recently purchased tables.

MISS SALLY ROYSTON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Royston, Jr., of Fox Chapel road, will sail tomorrow on the Carinthia for a trip abroad. Miss Royston, who was graduated in June from the Birmingham School, is sailing with Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Weaver, of New York. She expects to return late in November.

* * *

MR. AND MRS. DAVID R. M'AFEE, of Ellsworth avenue, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Jane Marie McAfee, to Frederick P. Fuller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Fuller, of New York, which took place August 18.

MISS ROSE K. SALVATORA and Robert Alderdice, both of Squirrel Hill, were married Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock in the Greenfield Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Dr. George H. Broening. Miss Martha Jones and Elmer Lowney, of McKeesport, were the attendants. Following a trip through New Jersey, Mr. and Mrs. Alderdice will live on Greenfield avenue.

MISS FLORENCE BINGAY will entertain at bridge tomorrow afternoon at her country home, "Arcadia Lawns" in honor of two prospective fall brides, Miss Ruth Rodgers, of Riverview avenue, Bellevue, and Miss Mary Louise Stanton, of McClure avenue, North Side. There will be 40 guests.

MR. AND MRS. FREDERICK CLINTON BAIRD, of Fifth avenue, entertained at dinner Wednesday night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Graham Willett Hume, of the Cathedral Mansions. Mrs. Hume was formerly Miss Helen Cook, of Cleveland.

The club will begin its season October 5 with the president's reception. On October 19 Mrs. Dulce Fiske Fairman will be the speaker and on November 16 Miss Sara Soffel will talk on "International Relations." Guest night will be November 22 in the Hillsdale School and the December meetings will include a program by Mrs. F. F. Rohrer, Pittsburgh composer, assisted by Mrs. Lucille Miller Werner, Mrs. Walter E. Close and the club choral. A children's party on December 21 will be the last event of 1923, while the new year will begin with the mid-winter reception. A play and subsequent meetings under the various departments, a talk by Elmer Kenyon, of the Drama League, the St. Patrick's card party and the annual luncheon are among other things to be anticipated before the season's end.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Principle of the Thing

By JULIA ELAM

HE was a bluff, kindly gentleman of the old school, upright in his principles and insistent upon a square deal from and to all. He was also a widower.

Today he passed her with scarcely a word of greeting and walked direct to Mr. Dean, the proprietor of the drug store.

"Look here!" he boomed gruffly, the suggestion of a smile lingering about his lips. "Why didn't I get the free 25-cent tube of tooth paste with the toothbrush I bought yesterday?"

"It was given only as a 'special' with the 35-cent toothbrush," Mr. Dean explained.

"But if it was given with the 35-cent toothbrush, it should certainly have been given with the 50-cent toothbrush—not that I care for the tooth paste—it's the principle of the thing."

It was time for Mamie's lunch hour, so, without hearing the remainder of the conversation, she slipped out to get her hat. She wondered if Mr. Thomas would get the toothbrush.

As she came through the store, she glanced back and saw Mr. Thomas, whose back was turned to her, gesticulating violently. Anxious to hear the outcome, she loitered around, picking up and examining different articles on display. A moment more and Mr. Thomas shot past her like a bullet. She noted that he was very red in the face.

She advanced hastily to the door, and Mr. Thomas, with a slight grunt, held it open for her pass out.

"Miss Scott, this is an outrage—an outrage," he began. "Why should you give a free tube of tooth paste with a thirty-five cent toothbrush and not give it with a fifty cent one?"

"It does seem unreasonable," Mamie murmured.

"Unreasonable—of course, it's unreasonable. It's nothing but absurdity. It's simply a trick to swindle people."

So heated and absorbed was he in his tirade that he walked three squares up the street with Mamie.

"I'm going to lunch here, Mr. Thomas," Mamie observed in front of the Linwood Restaurant, "I'm sorry about the tooth paste."

Mr. Thomas caught his breath with a little gasp, seized her by the arm, and escorted her through the glass doorway.

"And I told him," he went on—"I'll go to lunch here, too he added in explanation, "so I can tell you the rest of it—I told him to think about it and let me know if I wasn't right—if my logic wasn't sound."

Mamie had a mental vision of Mr. Dean's ever 'mitting that he was wrong or ever yielding a point, but she did not express her doubht to Mr. Thomas. She listened sweetly.

Mr. Thomas led her to a cozy little table in an alcove.

"What will you have," Miss Scott?" he questioned politely, as a deferential waiter approached.

Mamie hesitated between her usual skimpy order and what she really desired.

"I think I'll take the chicken a la king," Mr. Thomas said.

Perhaps he intended it as a tactful hint of what he was willing to pay and Mamie gladly accepted it as that.

"I'll take chicken a la king, too," she murmured.

The lunch tasted delicious to Mamie, for she never dared order for herself anything so elaborate.

Mr. Thomas thawed considerably under the influence of the food and hot coffee.

"It's pretty tiresome for an old codger like me knocking around in hotels and restaurants," he admitted. "I get damned tired of food like this."

"Yes; I should think you would," Mamie rejoined sympathetically. "Do—do you like broiled beefsteak and batterbread?" she suggested timidly.

"I should say I do," Mr. Thomas declared warmly. "It beats truck like this all hollow."

"Where do you live, Miss Scott," he queried, breaking into her happy abstraction.

"Oh—I—I have a room," Mamie responded, brought suddenly back to earth, "and I take my meals out."

"Isn't that sorta lonesome?" Mr. Thomas asked kindly.

"Yes; it is—I get mighty tired of eating my dinners alone in the evening. It isn't so bad at breakfast and lunch, when I'm in a hurry, but in the evening I guess folks just want somebody to talk to, to tell about what they've been doing all day and everything."

"You know I feel just like that sorta funny we both feel alike, ain't it?"

"It surely is," Mamie agreed. "It's hard to find somebody who thinks just like you do, and—and feels like you do too," she concluded in a burst of understanding. Tears stood in her sympathetic blue eyes.

When they had finished lunch, Mr. Thomas paid the check and tipped the waiter liberally; then he helped Mamie into her coat masterfully. He escorted her back to the store, talking genially the while. When they had reached the entrance, he said to her:

"Now you go back, Miss Scott, and see your employer. You are a clever woman—explain to him the principle of the thing. If he has changed his mind, so well and good; you may bring me the tube of paste to the Linwood Restaurant at 6 o'clock this evening, and we will have dinner together. If he doesn't care to give it to me, I shall never darken his door again. I don't care to see his face or that of any employe of his. It isn't the tube of paste—it's the principle of the thing."

Mamie went back to work, perplexed and uncertain as to what course to pursue. It was as much as her job was worth to mention the tooth paste to Mr. Dean—and jobs for women approaching middle age were not as thick as hops. Mr. Dean prided himself on the fact that he never changed his mind, that "no" meant "no" and that he never allowed an employe to ask him for a second decision. His word was as the law of the Medes and Persians.

On the other hand Mamie liked Mr. Thomas very, very much. She wanted to see him beam with pleasure upon receipt of the tooth paste, desired very much to eat dinner with him that night, not only because a quarter, her regular meal allowance, did not buy a satisfying repast, but because she really enjoyed his company. It made her feel sad to think he would never enter the store again. All afternoon her conscience and her courage were in combat.

That evening she met Mr. Thomas in front of the glass doors of the Linwood Restaurant, a tube of tooth paste extended in her hand.

"He saw I was right, eh!—changed his mind, eh!" Mr. Thomas beamed upon her.

He led her to the same cozy alcove in which they had so greatly enjoyed their lunch, and with an appreciative smile leaned towards her.

"You are a darned clever girl, Miss Scott, as well as an attractive one. You made your employer see the principle of the thing. When I talked to him this morning, I was afraid he was just a hopeless fool. It wasn't the tooth paste—it was the principle of the thing."

"Yes," Mamie agreed quickly, "I understood that from the beginning. I would have felt just as you did."

"Why, of course you would, Miss Scott, because you are an intelligent person."

"Funny how our thoughts and our principles are just alike and everything," Mamie said wistfully, her eyes misting with appreciation.

"There, there," Mr. Thomas soothed, patting her hand gently, "I was just going to say the same thing myself."

They lingered in the little alcove longer than was at all necessary.

As he toyed with the spoon of his demi-tasse, Mr. Thomas looked nervously around and then bent close to Mamie.

"It would be mighty nice to have someone like you, some sympathetic girl to live with—a—wife—will you marry me, Miss Scott?" he blurted.

Mamie knew that the quarter she had spent for the tooth paste was the best investment she had ever made in her life.

After AMOCO-GAS had been used by Studebakers and Erskines in all previous record-breaking runs, The Studebaker Corporation of America naturally chose "The Original Special Motor Fuel" for this spectacular achievement.

30,000 miles at better than 68 miles per hour on Amoco-Gas, of course!

ONE and one-fifth times the distance around the world--covered in 19 days and 18 nights! That's the record set by Studebaker Presidents in recent tests conducted on the Atlantic City Speedway by the Studebaker Corporation of America. Four cars made this record-breaking run--two roadsters and two sedans. And the fastest thousand miles of each roadster was the thirtieth and last--one of them reeling off the final thousand at 71.67 miles per hour.

The carburetors, manifolds and engine heads of these roadsters were sealed by A.A.A. officials at the start of the run and the seals were still unbroken at the finish! A far greater mileage in three weeks than most motorists roll up in a couple of years--but AMOCO-GAS delivered such faultless, smooth-flowing, trouble-free power that over 33,000,000 explosions in each cylinder were accomplished without any need of breaking the six seals.

Chalk up a new world's record for AMOCO-GAS--first choice of the record-makers and record-breakers! And it should be your first choice, too!

Babble About Amusements and Those Who Make Them in America and for Loyal Audiences of Old World

Actresses Do Not Get Old, And Aged Dramas Grow Young In the Capitals of Europe

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

THE most remarkable figure on the London stage today surely is Marie Tempest. If we had any graybeards in this razored age, they would remember Marie in their salad days. She is still playing, still sparkling, still sprightly and tempestuous, the idol of London.

Why not? Robert Mantell, who died this summer at 74, was playing Romeo only a few years earlier. Over in Vienna I gasped to see the name of Auguste Wilbrandt-Baudius on the playbill of the Hofburg. She is the widow of Adolph Wilbrandt, who was managing director of the theater two generations ago. She is 84 today—and was appearing regularly in Shaw's "Pygmalion."

Surely Lily Langtry and Rejane and Ristori are lurking around some corner waiting for their cues!

They are needed, for with a high average altitude among European actors today, there are no towering giants. There are no names to conjure with. There is no divine fire—nor even much smoke!

Can it be the fault of the dramatists? Where are they? The Comedie Francaise is playing "Le Voyage de M. Perrichon" and "Le Gendre de M. Poirier," both comedies of so ancient a vintage that they are used as text-books in our high schools.

Another Paris theater is presenting "Les Avaries" of Brieux, which we know as "Damaged Goods."

They are reviving Galsworthy's "Loyalties" in London, and a comedy called "She Stoops to Conquer," by a man named Oliver Goldsmith, who is buried in the yard of the Temple Church, not far from the hall where a certain William Shakespeare once acted in the production of his new comedy, "Twelfth Night."

But that was some time ago. Today "Show Boat" and "The Trial of Mary Dugan" appear to be the big hits. When men and women stand in line for three hours to get into a theater, that is a good sign! Old London is still young, like Marie Tempest. Madame Tussaud's Wax Works have been rebuilt since the fire, and a Maskelyne still shows the marvels of his magic in St. George's Hall, while new generations walk the aisle and wonder how it's done.

Near the Old Curiosity Shop a Punch and Judy performance is blocking the sidewalk. It's a portable street theater with the actor inside, like a snail in its house. There is hope for the stage when the oldest of tragedies is still being presented at popular prices—the actor passes the hat.

And so there'll be another Henry Irving some day, and a new Bernard Shaw! Just as Drury Lane has a new coat of red and yellow paint! And the Old Vic a new cement and stucco facade that turns it into a Young Vic.

The Prince of Wales — His Story.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

His Royal Highness, Edward, Prince of Wales, heir to the British throne, was born in midsummer of 1894. Guilty of much mischief during his childhood days, he was often punished. When he grew older he was sent to Osborne Naval College and later to Oxford for his university education. During the World War he became a captain in the army and went to France, but was not permitted to get into the actual fighting. After the war he made his first tour of Canada and then visited the United States. In his tour of Australia he had many unique adventures.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

EDWARD P.

By WALTER AND LEONARD TOWNSEND

IT WAS with regret that the Prince left on board the Renown, yet he was filled with pleasant anticipations on the eve of his visit to the mother island continent.

The Prince had rough sea weather on the journey. The fog grew so thick that the captain of the cruiser dared not move despite the impatient requests of the Prince. Finally, wireless messages were sent to the Australian fleet asking for destroyers to be sent to their help. The Prince was most keen to make a landing in Melbourne without delay. He knew there would be thousands of people waiting in the streets of the port and pictured their intense disappointment should he not turn up at the appointed hour. In response to the wirelessed request of the Renown H. M. A. S. Anzac came to the rescue, and amidst gigantic breakers landed the Prince and his party in Melbourne harbor.

PRINCE OF WALES

When the Prince entered Melbourne the streets were thronged. Immediately the Prince received 20 addresses of welcome to which it was physically impossible to reply in person. Mr. Hughes' welcome summed up the sentiment of all Australians: "The people of Australia see in you the things in which they believe!"

Despite the sleet, rain and fog, the patient, good-humored crowds waited hours for a mere sight of the Prince. So enthusiastic was the reception and so great the demand resultant upon the physical energies of the visitor that the press made appeals to the public with a view to sparing him for the remainder of his tour.

From Melbourne the Prince made triumphant progress to Western Victoria through the Werrible plain. Geelong, with its agricultural and shipping industries, Colac and, Camperdown, Ballarat—all were in turned visited by the Prince. At the latter town, the Prince opened an Arch of Victory. While at Ballarat, the Prince gave a speech in the pouring rain. The crowd was so dense that they could not all see him and only those immediately round the platform could hear his message. So large was the crowd that on the fringe a concert was being conducted in honor of the Prince while he was giving his speech. The Prince was drenched to the skin, but he did not mind. He had been informed that the rain broke a long drought season and he shared the pleasure of the inhabitants at this benefit to the crops.

It was inevitable that the strain of such arduous public work should make its mark on the Prince's health. He suffered a temporary breakdown and was ordered by his doctor to take a week's rest free from all publicity. The people did their best to allow him this short holiday without interruption, but the Prince was not sparing of himself. He played golf, rode, danced, and before breakfast each morning ran for a mile. When at last the time came for him to bid farewell to Melbourne, he left for Sydney with the words ringing in his ears, "Australia is proud of you!"

Sydney, the seat of Labor, gave the Prince no less enthusiastic a reception.

About 20,000 demobilized men broke work, sought out their old war khaki and voluntarily formed themselves into units over half a mile long for the Prince's inspection. Behind him were 30,000 spectators and thousands of bath-chairs containing invalided soldiers to his left. H. R. H. shook hands with every disabled man present.

From Sydney, the Prince traveled to Canberra, the new capital, which was then only a city of foundation stones. Then boarding the Renown the Prince traveled 2,000 miles by sea to Western Australia. Again he encountered the roughest of seas and when Albany was reached, a small boat had to convey him and his staff ashore.

Albany, Perth, Freemantle, Pemberton—all of them saw the Prince. Always his fresh, manly smile and sincere words of congratulation and thanks to the ex-servicemen greeted the people wherever he went.

Miraculous Escape

On the journey back through Perth, there was a railway accident which might have cost the Prince of Wales his life. The royal train, consisting of nine corridor sleeping coaches, was proceeding slowly down a single track in a swampy Australian forest, 10 miles from Bridgetown, when the rails gave way owing to the rain-softened track. The coaches were overturned, but no one was injured except the Prince's surgeon, who suffered slight abrasions. His Royal Highness was pinned down in his coach and when extricated would not leave until he had gathered together his papers. On the line-side to the anxious inquiries of the prime minister and other officials he made light of his mishap and jokingly set their minds at rest by remarking that "this was not on the official program," and lighting his pipe continued to assist his staff to salvage his own personal effects.

There was consternation throughout the Empire when the news of the accident was made known, and, in Australia, thanksgiving services were held in the cathedrals and shoals of telegrams were sent to H. R. H. congratulating him on his miraculous escape. At an address following the accident the Prince apologized for being delayed, but tactfully did not mention the accident.

Throughout the whole tour the Prince endeavored to get as much sport as possible out of his leisure time, and found great fun in kangaroo hunting when often he was in the saddle for a whole day on the run. Once, when motoring along a dusty road in Australia, the Prince came across a motorcyclist who had had a breakdown. H. R. H. alighted and helped the cyclist to repair his machine. The man thanked him, and asked if he might know his name.

"I am the Prince of Wales!" answered H. R. H. For a moment the man grinned at H. R. H., then, winking an eye, said:

"And I'm the King of England!"

A day or two later, at a reception in one of the big towns, the motorcyclist came face to face with the Prince and saw, in his horrified confusion, that it really was the Prince of Wales who had helped him. But the Prince came to his rescue with Quixotic chivalry.

"Glad to meet you again, dad," he remarked brightly, and shook the "king's" hand warmly.

Poses for Child

While in New Zealand many were the attempts to snapshot His Royal Highness. One little girl he espied vainly struggling to focus him. Quickly he ran up to her and posed. Then, just as she was about to snap him, the Prince looked up at the sun, and, telling the maiden to hold on a second, explained to her that the sun must not shine on her camera lens. He instructed her where best to stand, and then put on his most charming smile.

After visiting South Australia, the Prince left Adelaide for Tasmania. By this time his voice had almost given out owing to the strain imposed upon it by frequent speechmaking, and at Hobart he whispered his reply to the address of welcome. Leaving Tasmania for Queensland, the Prince again visited Sydney, where he spent a few days in a

RECOGNIZE HIM?

Honestly, now, if you were asked, could you tell the name of the traffic patrolman on your corner, the one who speaks to you when you pass by? The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, if you can't, will help you a bit. Each day there is published the photograph of one of the city's traffic officers. Here is one for today. His name tomorrow!

YESTERDAY'S "TRAFFIC COP" WAS EDWARD GETZ, MARRIED, 4208 DAVISON STREET, WHO HANDLES THE CORNER AT SIXTH AND WEBSTER AVENUES. HE HAS BEEN POLICING 13 YEARS, FOUR OF WHICH HE HAS SPENT IN TRAFFIC WORK.

FIVE LOSE LIVES AS PLANES CRASH

ROCKFORD, Ill., Sept. 7.—(A.P.)—The sister ship of Bert Hassell's monoplane, the Greater Rockford, today was submerged in the Rock River.

A World War aviator was killed and four Rockford men seriously injured when its motor failed at a height of 200 feet and the plane toppled over a wire into the river yesterday.

M. E. Headley, the pilot, who served overseas with the Twenty-eighth Pursuit Squadron, was instantly killed.

The injured, all passengers, were: Rickard Ives, who may die of a fractured skull, broken leg and internal injuries; Horace H. Tuck, broken ribs; Dean Pringey, broken jaw; Paul Charn, bruises.

The plane was owned by the Packard Electric Company of Warren, O., and had only two stops remaining before a 10,000-mile reliability tour of 35 cities would have been completed.

TWO DIE AT FAIR

HOUGHTON, Mich., Sept. 7.—(A.P.)—An airplane crash near Keweenaw Bay took the lives of two pilots yesterday. Walfred Petaja, a commercial pilot, and Rudolph Martin of Dollar Bay, Mich., who was giving passenger flights at a county fair, were the victims.

WING CRUMPLES

CLEVELAND, Sept. 7.—(A.P.)—A crumpled wing forced a Laird biplane 600 feet to the ground at the municipal airport yesterday and instantly killed George Stowell of Detroit, the pilot, and Gil Merryman, also of Detroit, a passenger.

Stowell had borrowed the plane from E. J. Merryman of Cleveland for a practice flight. Merryman, his passenger, was manager of the Stout Air Service Company's Cleveland office, and Stowell was a pilot for the company.

MOTOR DROPS OUT

HONDO, Tex., Sept. 7.—(A.P.)—Their plane becoming a glider when the engine dropped out while flying near Hondo yesterday, John Wood and Oscar Wallace, Federal prohibition agents, escaped death when they made a perfect emergency landing in a field. The officers were uninjured in the accident.

SEIZE FOUR MORE IN BOOTLEG KILLINGS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 7.—(A.P.)—District Attorney John Monaghan announced today that four additional arrests had been made in connection with the grand jury's investigation of gang murders and bootlegging activities in this city.

"This marks one of the most important developments in the investigation," said the District Attorney. "We are now prepared to make disclosures which will surpass the revelations that have been made heretofore."

FIFTH MAN SOUGHT

The prosecutor declined to reveal the names of the four men arrested.

It was reported that a fifth man, said to have gone to Canada or to a western state, was being sought. He is said to have witnessed one of the gang murders under investigation.

Nation-wide ramifications of the Philadelphia rum ring were revealed by District Attorney Monaghan today.

He said he had evidence ready for presentation to the grand jury showing that within the last two years the bootleg ring of which Max "Boo Boo" Hoff is alleged to be the head, had diverted more than 350,000 gallons of alcohol from a single distillery in this city "to all parts of the country." Hoff is a manager of prize fighters.

The prosecutor's announcement shared interest with an eight-page statement alleged to have been made by Edward S. Goldberg, dealer in machine guns and ammunition, declaring that Hoff had purchased from him three machine guns and a number of bullet-proof vests such as were used by bootleggers and gangsters in their warfare for the control of the liquor business.

Goldberg was released in $10,000 bail on a charge of perjury after he had dictated and signed the statement.

HOFF CALLED 8TH TIME

Hoff was before the grand jury last night for the eighth time and when he was excused he was handed a subpena to appear again today. He declined to comment on Goldberg's statement or to say whether the jurors had questioned him along that line.

Delegate

ROBERT E. HAVEN

Robert E. Haven has been named one of the local delegates to the seventy-third International Typographical Union national convention, Charleston, S. C., September 10-15. Frank N. A. Riefer has been elected president of Pittsburgh Typographical Union No. 7, succeeding the late Morris Bloomington.

2 Couples Hurt in Wreck

Two men and their wives are in Columbia Hospital from injuries suffered last midnight when the steering rod on the automobile of H. Robert Le Vine, 31, optometrist, of 5868 Phillips avenue, broke, causing the car to run off the William Penn highway and upset, near Murraysville.

Le Vine and his wife Marion, 30, as well as Denning Gara, 47, and his wife, Josephine, 43, of 2925 Glenmore avenue, Dormont, were pinned in the car. Mrs. Gara suffered probable internal injuries. The party was returning from Atlantic City, Wilkinsburg police said.

Found unconscious in Frankstown road, Wilkinsburg, beside his automobile which had crashed into a pole, Isadore Back, 38, of 211 Frankstown road, was picked up by automobilists and taken to Columbia Hospital. He is suffering from a possible fracture of the skull. His automobile apparently had skidded.

Two girls and a woman were injured when their automobile was struck by a truck at Wilkins and Murrayhill avenues, Squirrel Hill. They were taken to the Homeopathic Hospital. They are Genevieve Moser, 16, of 130 Grotto street; Lora Lee Schmarr, 15, of 1316 Grotto street, and Mae Moser, 17, of 6511 Clifford street. The automobile was driven by Frederick Shields, 20, of 326 Mingo street, and the truck was driven by James Thompson, 27, of 319 Lawn street. Both drivers were released on forfeits.

THROWS SON, 7, TO SAFETY, DIES IN AUTO-TRAIN CRASH

LACHUTE, Que., Sept. 7.—(A.P.)—The presence of mind of a father in throwing his 7-year-old son from an automobile when he saw that a collision with a train was inevitable saved the boy's life. The lad was uninjured. The father and the driver of the car were killed.

The dead are Col. G. N. Blais, an engineer in the provincial department of roads, and Lomer Fugere, divisional superintendent of roads at Lachute. The Fugere boy was saved.

The automobile in which they were riding collided with a Canadian Pacific Railway train near here yesterday.

Blais was a brother-in-law of J. A. Boullanger, deputy minister of roads and Fugere was a nephew of Sir Lomer Gouin, former premier of the province and former minister of justice in the Dominion government.

SLAIN, WILL CUTS OFF SEVEN

STEUBENVILLE, O., Sept. 7.—Charles Freiling, 76, receives the bulk of the $75,000 estate left by his father, a retired farmer, who was found shot dead in his home near here a week ago.

Freiling's will, filed for probate yesterday, gives $200 to his widow and $5 each to eight children.

At the time of his marriage to Mrs. Agnes Perkins, 42, last June at Cumberland, Md., Freiling deeded property valued at $12,000 to her.

Jefferson county authorities are awaiting reports of Pittsburgh finger print experts before they say whether in their opinion Freiling committed suicide or was murdered.

The roich children are returning from mountain and seaside resorts to stay here for a while and attend school or to pack up and be off for private schools in various parts of the country. You can tell they are back because the blinds on the great mansions in the exclusive parts of town are being raised once again, and maids in black and white, nurses in white, and gardeners, who nearly always, curiously enough, need their beards trimmed, are seen again.

In Kirkpatrick street, as a contrast, the children up that way spent the summer at home this year. For their bathing they had the nozzle of a hose turned on them, their bathing suits were of patched underwear, and their mountain air consisted of taking in the ozone of neighboring Herron Hill.

But the children of Kirkpatrick street had a pretty good time, too. An inventive genius of that neighborhood constructed a roller coaster, capable of carrying two passengers, and the originator was not without a commercial instinct. Tiring of riding himself he rented out his roller coaster car for a cent a ride.

One of our most trusted spies, T. H. B. P., in his daily report, says the engineer who conceived the improvised roller coaster is James Clark.

WE WENT to see "Warming Up" at the Stanley, a baseball picture, for our exprience in such matters had led us to suspect that many baseball incongruities slip into baseball fiction, drama and movies. But "Warming Up," it seems, met practically every critical test. Dix, the hero, looked like a great many baseball rookies we have seen. One error the continuity man, who we understand is superior to the author, overlooked. Baseball magnate's daughters as a rule do not associate with ball players and baseball magnates seldom loaf with their players. In the old days they did, but they don't now. Perhaps the answer of the movie men will be: "But this was a picture of the time when they did."

Will Rogers Says

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 7.

Politics are receiving a lot of attention because we have nothing else to interest us. We don't have to worry about anything.

No nation in the history of the world was ever sitting as pretty. If we want anything, all we have to do is to go and buy it on credit.

So that leaves us without any economic problem whatever, except perhaps some day to have to pay for them.

But we are certainly not thinking about that this early.

Yours for more credit and longer payments, WILL.

FAVOR SHIFTING MT. LEBANON BOUNDARY

A report of the commission appointed by Quarter Sessions Court to inquire into the propriety of altering the boundary line between Mt. Lebanon and Baldwin townships was filed in court yesterday.

It was ordered confirmed and will lie over until the next term of court when the presiding judge will make an order.

The commission reported having held hearings concerning the proposed change. The testimony was to the effect that the change would be beneficial.

The boundary line now cuts the farm of George C. Smith in half, cuts off several acres of the Sunset Hills plan from Mt. Lebanon and cuts off eight acres of the estate of J. H. Daub.

The Baldwin Township School is two miles away while a new Mt. Lebanon township school is only a quarter of a mile from these properties, and if these sections were to be included in Mt. Lebanon township residents on these properties would not only derive benefit of the school, but would have access to the Mt. Lebanon sewage system.

NEW CASTLE TO ENFORCE SCHOOL TRAFFIC LAWS

DEAR MARION DAVIES:

We want to thank you in behalf of our patrons for the fun you have brought us all in your new picture "The Cardboard Lover." We think you are the greatest comedienne on the screen today. To bring laughter to humanity is a great gift, for it takes us away from reality and lets us relax and forget. In "The Fair Co-ed" and in "The Patsy" you gave us delightfully mirthful entertainment. Now you bring us the famous Broadway stage hit and it is a pleasure to tell our public that you have come to town again with one of the most screamingly funny comedies on record.

NO LONGER HAS HEALTH TROUBLES

McKees Rocks Elderly Lady Says Ten Herbs Ended Indigestion and Rheumatism.

"Ten Herbs has increased my strength and made me feel better in every way," was the statement of Mrs. Mary Wendel, 42 McKinney Avenue, McKees Rocks, Pa., (near Pittsburgh), to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating this popular herbal compound to crowds of men and women.

MRS. MARY WENDEL

"I used to suffer with indigestion," continued Mrs. Wendel, who is 65 years of age. "Food would sour and cause me to vomit. For years I could not eat meat or tomatoes. I seemed always to be filled with gas, and water would run out of my mouth. Constipation troubled me, and I was constantly taking physics. I had rheumatism in both shoulders—sometimes the pains felt as though needles were sticking me. I was so nervous that I would lie awake for hours at a time at night. My liver did not work right. I always had a tired feeling. Dizzy spells came on me and at times everything turned black. There were pains across my back, and I did not have much strength.

"After reading about Ten Herbs in the newspapers, I started using your medicine. Three bottles surely gave me splendid results. I can eat anything now without having indigestion. Constipation has been relieved. My nerves are in good condition. I sleep through the whole night and can eat a hearty breakfast when morning comes. My liver does not trouble me any more, and I am free of dizzy spells and black spots before my eyes. The pains are gone from my back. I do not hesitate to recommend Ten Herbs to the public."

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine.

Benny Black Returns From Europe Too Busy to Bother With Girls

CHAPTER I.

DIANA RAND, little, 19, and very chic, peered into the jewelry window, her short skirts blowing tauntingly in the slight breeze. Alongside, a very antithesis in type, stood a companion, tall, her face rounded and exquisite, her darked eyes covered with long silken lashes, gowned in fashions long past, ridiculous but for her astonishing poise. For Diana Rand, of Manor Park, and Beatrice Shelton, both beautiful, both friends, both daughters of wealth, were different as their clothes illustrated.

Young Benjamin Carrington Black, watching them from across the street, marveled. He asked himself what quirk of fancy made the tall girl so marked in her long dresses, her old-fashioned hat. He mused until they moved into the shop, and still pondering, saw a clerk take from the window a graceful little antique dancing girl. He was still staring, transfixed, at the little shop when the gayly tripping Diana came out with a bundle under her arm—and hopped into a flashy roadster parked nearby.

He hadn't noticed, however, a third young woman, with flounces and curls, follow the two into the store. He hadn't heard the clerk, when she asked for a string of beads, refuse her credit. He hadn't seen the scowl, nor the unsympathetic turn of the heads of Beatrice Shelton and Diana when they overheard it.

No, he wasn't interested except in trying to discover for himself which was Diana, which was Beatrice.

"I'm glad I came to this man's town," he murmured, as the pair were about to start. He noted the third girl enter the car, and sensed that she was unwanted. But when, in a cloud of smoke, the car moved on, he wandered off, and was unable to see Beatrice, the third girl, Ann Evart, a few blocks farther, wave to three young men, hop out of the car and join them. Nor did anyone but Diana see the anger that betrayed the feelings of Beatrice, her flaming cheeks.

"Noddy and Toddy," said Diana. "And Norman Gregory with them," she added.

"Shucks—wait 'till tonight. We'll see. But let me off at home, Di, and—"

"We'll see you tonight," said Diana, comfortingly, and with the other girl entering the pathway to a big, old-fashioned house, she started her car once more and arrived shortly at the mansion that was her father's.

Diana was a happy daughter, in a happy home environment, with her father, a merry, understanding sort of a man, her mother youthful and equally knowing of her daughter.

Beatrice was the child of a miser and a mistrusting, suspicious mother—an enemy of modernty, of youth. Her brother, Freddie, was the only other child.

Ann Everts' home was a hotel room, and after leaving Toddy and Noddy, to this she sent her little feet. She was wistful looking. All men agreed to that. But when she entered the door of the ordinary room—a typical hotel room, she faced a woman sitting by the window in an easy chair.

"Anything happen?" the woman asked. Her voice was coarsely questioning.

"Anything happen!" the girl blazed, flinging her hat on the bed.

"Well, why didn't you pay the jewelry shop? Giving me the door before that Rand snip. A fine chance I'll stand in this town with you dead-beating the whole place!"

Hanna Evart—she signed herself Hanette and lived in fear that chance would reveal her parents' low taste in names—drew herself up, pulling at the soiled and cigaret-burned negligee she wore, a discarded one of Ann's.

"So this," she began, "is the thanks I get! Sneaking jewelry for yourself, were you while I sit here without shoes! You'd spend my last nickel like your father before you—" She began to cry, noisily, tears running down her make-up and leaving sallow furrows. "Your poor mother that's slaved like a dog from the day you was born! What did I leave Jim Evart for, shiftless dreamer that he was, if not to give you a chance!

"What did I cook and wash dishes for if it wasn't to get money to buy you things? You see these?" She waved her hands—nails too brightly polished, palms too pudgily redolent of skin food and whitener—"these did it—went into filthy scrub pails, cleaning other women's floors so you could have a chance! For your sake!" She yelped frantically.

Ann shrugged, turned a cool shoulder. "Forget it, mother. You figured you'd get what you always wanted if you put me on the marriage market. That's why you walked out on Pa. And I'd like to see the floor you scrubbed."

"That's gratitude — that's respect! Oh—"

Ann left her to finish the tirade, moving leisurely through the bath to a cubby-hole of room barely large enough for a single bed and a chest of drawers. Stepping out of her dress she laid down, arms behind her head, thinking.

She remembered their leaving home. She was 10 years old then and her father had kissed her and told her to be a good girl. Pneumonia took him not long afterward. A quiet person he was, one who could not manage to make the grade of his wife's ambition.

Hanna had taken her to San Francisco and there had been a struggle for a time. Hanna went to work—perhaps she did scrub floors. But this phase of their living passed swiftly; money began to come in from somewhere.

There was the night Ann awakened and heard her mother quarreling with rich old Lankley who had begun to appear. To this day she remembered with a start of terror his senile cry, "This is blackmail!" But Hanna had been happy, almost radiant with victory the next day and they had moved East, settled down in New York.

They lived comfortably until a year ago, Hanna carrying on a relentless campaign for a "suitable" marriage for Ann, who helped gracelessly but with diligence. Then, a year ago, they had come to Manor Park, taken what Ann guessed to be their last stand. Hanna complained that they were nearly broke.

The girl fell asleep.

CHAPTER II.

JUST before that sudden last turn which sends River Road plunging down the hill to merge with the state highway, Tappan Zee creeps up into a miniature bay between the grounds of the Yacht Club and Vantage Point. And quite at the end of the Point, so it almost overhangs the calmly flowing river, is the big old ramshackle building of the University Club.

Long ago when Manor Park was largely forest this was a summer hotel; now it serves as a suburban residence for fraternity brothers who occupy in leisurely comfort the two upper stories, dine in the excellent restaurant on the ground floor, and meet sociably in the lounge across the corridor.

When Mr. Benjamin Black had concluded neatly his business at the Main street bank, he strolled out Cedar street and southward toward the University Club, his long figure casting a longer shadow at his side, ruddy brown head bared to the breeze cooling with the approach of evening.

Benny—so his friends called him—felt a glowing contentment. He liked the day, the town, the trees which rustled and flirted their branches, the flowers massed brightly on velvet lawns. He found life highly satisfactory, take it all in all.

Fate had given him rather more than a break. A chap out of college year before last and but just returned from twelve months' roaming about Europe to have the vice-presidency of Joseph C. Black Son handed to him, to be delegated to establish an eastern branch of the great factory in St. Louis whose product, superfine shoes, was famous the world over—this was rather more than he had expected, much as that had been.

But he had no mind for taking advantage of his luck. His father, whom Benny admired more than any human being, living or dead, had begun at a cobbler's bench and climbed slowly at first, then by mighty leaps. And Benny was his father's son. Fortunate that such a fine start had come his way, but it was not essential. Eventually he would have been bound to stand at the top, though without Joseph Carrington Black behind him it would have been a stiff job.

So he told himself and tiny laughing-wrinkles played about his eyes. Lightish brown eyes flecked with gold when the sun struck down, a whitely flashing smile, almost too regular features brown by golf and polo and ocean travel. And a tilt to his shoulders, a carefree rhythm in all his movements. Such portion of feminine Manor Park as was on the street turned to stare after the personable stranger. But he saw only what was on his mind—business, the factory over in the industrial section of the town with its wheels already turning, profits rolling up and down.

At the club he picked up some mail and went on to his quarters, a two-room and bath apartment overlooking the river. A typical man's refuge, the living room, filled with deep chairs and lamps at convenient angles and a scattering of ash-trays. Magazines were everywhere, some open and put by face downward, others in stacks, some with leaves creased and pencil marks along the margins. Trade magazines having to do with shoe manufacturing and a few on art, all of those featuring studies of feminine feet.

Benny surveyed the place with a boyish grin, brought up a complacent sigh which became a grunt as he spied a pile of photographs tumbling over the table.

"Do something with those," he mused aloud and once more inspected the room. Tobacco jars, a pair of loving cups on the mantel; drawing board and crayons awaiting a place on the table. He began to snuffle the pictures, studying them idly.

The first was the likeness of a beautiful girl, as were the second and the third and all the others. All inscribed dashingly or in hands scrawlingly unformed or slyly sophisticated; some with messages vaguely mysterious, others possessive or assured or provocative and every one with some word of love.

The girl he had wanted to marry in his freshman year; the one he had kissed at a house party who later came tapping at his door; the girl who crossed on the liner and was always turning up in odd corners of Europe; the dancer who had tried to frame a marriage. . . .

He pushed the pictures away, disturbed and angry. What the devil had he brought them along for? No time for fooling now; more important things to think about. Women! Two sorts of women in this world: the dull, good sort and the others. Some day probably he would marry one of the first and settle down in a respectable gloom, but until that day he was too busy to bother with any of them, especially the lively numbers. . . .

Too much cutting up going on, anyway! That was what had caught Jen. Poor kid, trying to play the game and going under—or almost. Dad had seen to it that the shreds of her pride were saved, but her trouble had made her brother do a lot of thinking. The little sister and he had been closer than most and her grief was his as well.

In the end he chucked the photographs beneath the shirts in his bureau drawer and settled himself in one of the deep chairs with a bulky and dry trade magazine on his knees, looking very boyish under the shaded light and not at all like one through with girls forever.

The telephone roused him as darkness was falling. Norman Gregory, who had been the year ahead of him at college, just had heard of his arrival.

"Say, it's great, your coming here, Benny! Met anybody yet? There's a mob dusting off the door-mats. Come over to the Yacht Club tonight and exercise the dogs."

"Thanks, Norm, but I won't have time. Designing some new shoe styles, you know."

Norman laughed with a fine scorn and wanted to know when Benny got to be a grind. "Come and see who'll wear the things your jolly old factory turns out. See you later."

Benny was a bit restless after that. June night and a moon—and tomorrow was another day. And finally he saw, in the empty air, a pair of astonishingly high heels—a slim, eager figure leaning toward a window—curly black head bobbing excitedly. Would they be at the party—Miss Modern and the Frump?

He got up and began to dress.

CHAPTER III.

DIANA glanced at a funny little clock, fashioned like a church tower gone tipsy, and speeded her dressing. Mother and Dad were dining out and she had had a tray in her room; now she jumped up, trailing drapings of red and green triangles and 20 little pairs of winged mules danced in the mirrors as she skipped toward the bed where Suzette, whom Mother loaned her sometimes, had laid out her clothes.

Bonnets -:- -:- By Fanny Darrell

© 1928 Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved.

TIME was when the girl in the sunbonnet was the favorite heroine of song and story. But now one never hears much about the sunbonnet, 'neath which one had to peep to get a glimpse of laughing eyes and rosebud mouth and witching curls.

Now the favorite bonnet of the modern girl is her own halo of glistening hair. She defies Old Sol to do his worst to her and the result—she has a clear sparkling eye, a glowing healthful cheek and each tiny hair seems to wiggle in glee at its freedom from confinement.

Bonnets? Who cares for the sun? Rather a tanned cheek and a good time than an all enveloping bonnet and blushing timidity. And who dares deny that there is more charm in frankness and the healthful beauty of Today's Girl than in the shyness of Grandmother's fainting heroine?

The Princess Resumes Her Confession to Madge

AS the girl who had called herself Eleanor Lincoln entered her own room again, she turned to me with an almost pettish expresion.

"How much darker it is in here than in Anna's room!" she exclaimed. "Oh! I see! It is that window shade! I almost hever have it down. Will you raise it please?"

Before I had time either to obey or ignore the command, for such it undeniably was, the girl threw out impulsive hands to me.

"Please forgive me!" she said, "I am off guard today. You see things are so different in my country. But I really did not mean to be rude."

"It is perfectly all right," I told her, a bit perfunctorily, for I could not help but see what she meant by things being different in her country." She meant that in the minds of her family there was a great gulf between members of a royal dynasty and Americans of whatever class. And she undoubtedly had been used to giving commands to people who in her mind were far above me in station.

She flashed across the room with the evident intention of drawing the shade, but I spoke warningly before she had touched the cord.

"Don't touch that curtain until I have a chance to tell you something you ought to know!"

She whirled toward me in amazement.

"Why!" What! Do you mean that—"

Her voice died away, her eyes stared into mine. I was sure that she guessed part at least of what I was going to tell her.

"While you were asleep, someone was perched in the branches of the big oak outside. I am sure that whoever it was, had field glasses and was looking into the room. I caught the reflection from them in an odd conjunction with the mirror and the sunlight upon the wall. It probably was some mischievous boy, but I think it is as well to keep the shade drawn for a while."

I purposely had introduced the suggestion of the intruder being a mischievous boy, for until she was ready to give me her confidence, I did not wish her to suspect that I knew anything concerning the men who were persecuting her. She grasped at it avidly.

"Yes, it must have been a boy," she said, "and I will keep that shade down the rest of the day at any rate. I—I—believe I will lie down again. I—I—am not so strong as I fancied."

That she had understood only too well the meaning of the hidden watcher in the big oak was as patent as was the terror which was gripping her. But when with my aid she was again in her bed, she waited only for a minute before taking up the story of her adventures again with an air of casualness, almost flippancy, which I guessed was camouflage born of a determination not to reveal how frightened she was.

"When we went to Anna's room," she began hesitatingly, "I was telling you of having my 'nose bobbed,' was I not?"

I echoed the litle laugh which she gave at the odd slang term for an increasingly popular operation.

"You spoke of it," I returned, carefully ignoring—as I saw she was determined to do—her reference to the "fortune" paid her for delivering a message, "but I think you were just about to go on board the steamer when you marked the chapter 'to be continued in our next.'"

"Nothing happened on the steamer," she returned quickly. "But I secretly had written to Anna and Henry, telling them to be in New York when I reached there, and to find some way of communicating with me without anybody else of our party knowing it. You can't imagine how happy I was when during the very first week of our stay here, a maid at the hotel slipped me a note from Anna."

HALF WIVES

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

At Last the Dream House Is Not Only a Dream But Really Ione's

NOW he went through it grimly. Mrs. Hanley made small, neat notes; she worked in such a rapid, capable manner that he concentrated with no effort. He was astonished toward the end to find himself interested. When he looked at his watch it was 6 o'clock.

"Holy smoke! Didn't mean to keep you overtime, you know."

"That's quite all right, Mr. Blake. I'll have this ready by 10 tomorrow. Would you like me to answer the unimportant letters?"

"You can do that? You bet I would! Give me more time with this campaign of mine."

He felt a quickening of enthusiasm when he thought of the campaign. It was his own; prove something to Weimar if he could put it over and show a return. Prove he wasn't asleep on the job.

It didn't occur to him that this hadn't seemed important not a great while ago.

A hungry and excited Alan burst in upon Ione that evening.

The coffee and sinkers had not proved substantial and now there was a great void in the region of his waist line and a tantalizing memory in his throat of hot gingerbread and egg souffle.

He would eat and eat. And after he had eaten long and vigorously he would talk. Tell the darn kid what he was going to do. See what she had to say.

She met him at the door again, a blithsome, lovely little wife. Bungalow apron over her ruffles, greeting him with joyous small sounds of welcome.

"So late he is! Well, and was it a hard day? Glad to have him back, you bet you—"

"Say, I worked to beat the devil! Rustle the eats, girl. Your ol' friend husband's starving. Be with you in a jiffy now."

And he was. He sat down eagerly at the tea wagon, grinning, reached for the soup. There was plenty of it, all boiling hot, and a stack of bread slices and small pats of butter.

She watched him put away the soup, talking brightly about small things. Did he think she might do over the bedroom set with gray enamel? And how did he like the new cushion she had made out of an old dress? And—and—

He swallowed the last drop and put down his spoon. "Next course and make it snappy, please!"

She was pouring tea. "Have to drink this clear, Lanny, love, 'cause there's no cream. There isn't any next course."

"Huh? Quit kidding. I'm starved. I tell you."

"No, really. You see we're all broke 'n'everything. Unless you've got a fortune buried somewhere. After I'd paid Klarschen and settled some bills—see for yourself, darlingest. Old cash box is bare as Mother Hubbard's cupboard."

All unconcerned she spoke, refusing, however, to meet his stare. She heard him mutter, "Good Lord!" and shove his chair back.

Throughout the evening his eyes kept following her beneath their drawn-down brows. It was almost as if he never had seen her before.

The next day Alan twice departed from his wonted ways. The first time he telephoned a friend at the Greek Letter Club and asked for the return of money he had loaned. The second he stopped on his way home in the evening and bought a large order of chops.

Ione showed no surprise when she took them. "And while they're broiling you might just run down for bread and cream, dear. You don't mind? Couldn't get them today, you see, for I've closed our charge accounts."

He stared again but he went.

It was toward the end of the week that he came home very late. "Bucked the subway jam tonight, Io. Listen, did you know it was costing seven or eight a week to run that car? I've put it in storage and written Hill. No sense throwing money around like that."

She answered, meekly, "No, dear. 'Course there isn't."

CHAPTER XLIII.

NOW it was Autumn again and eve of the anniversary which above all others Ione held dear.

Three years ago Alan came swinging up Cedar road to her and they strolled under yellowing locusts for their first picnic at North Mountain.

Three years ago she felt a radiance in her heart, through her spirit, a golden, holy light. "This is love," she said to herself that day. "This is mine for as long as I live!"

A gentle day, sweet as a prayer. Other days had been dear. But this one was hers and Alan's alone, a secret, sacred thing.

Tomorrow they would go again to the mountain; keep a tryst with memory. Already the sandwiches were packed, all funny little hearts and diamonds and checkerboards to make him say, "Hey, Frills—hey, hey! Getting pretty fine and fancy with your ol' friend husband, aren't you?"

She waited for him to come home as she had waited other nights throughout the summer. He would be late. He always was late now. Early in the morning he left her; late he came back again. Ever a bit wearily, scowling over some knotty office problem.

"Listen, Io; do you think I ought to do thus and so? How do you spose the boss would feel about this, Frills? Today I took up that matter—"

Full of his work he would be, telling her about it. No longer the careless, happy-go-lucky small-boy-grown-tall of the past two years. An older Lanny, almost solemn at times.

It hadn't been easy, she thought as she sat there in the lounge chair, pressing her hands together in the old, anxious way. These months just gone! Days when she thought her plan had failed, when she said to herself, "I began wrong—took the wrong fork in the road. I can't go back. You can't undo what's done; you can't start over—"

Now she heard his step and sprang up, all eager expectancy. For tonight he had promised her a surprise. Perhaps he's have a surprise, he had told her, laughing in a low, excited way.

Now he came tearing in, swept her in his arms, swung her off her feet, kissing her as if he only that moment had fallen in love.

"Guess what, Io? Ah, you'd never! Listen, you're ol' friend husband's manager now! Head of the new shebang all by himself; Hot dawg! How d'you like it, girl? Told you I'd have a surprise!"

"My dear—my dear—"

"And that's not all. A good ol' raise. Twenty-five a week at one crack! 'Nother in six months if I keep going strong. Watch me! Well, how about it, Frills? Hurry, now—"

"'Course I do, darlingest, wonderfulest! Why, Lan, we'll be just about rich! But you have worked too hard, dear. I've been a little worried."

He roared at that and kissed her all over again. "Good for me, Frills. Never saw such pals as me 'an' work."

Autumn on North Mountain. Blue and gold and purple autumn shot with forest crimson; warm glory of crystal air under the spruce and tamaracks where the anniversary sandwiches were spread on pine needles.

Ione remembering that other day, the first when love was a song in her veins; remembering while her spirit shouted, "This is happier; this is living beauty, coming here with him after all that has gone, knowing whatever happens I always shall have him and his love."

Alan watching her with lights down his eyes, hazel flecks all together through the gray.

"Happy, Frills?"

"So happy, Lan! What a glorious thing life is!"

"Yes. What's gone—you understand about that, Io? Forgive some things—"

"I've nothing to forgive, boy dear. I thought my way was right. Ah—you see—"

"These modern fifty-fifty marriages, Frills—did you ever stop to think there's only one real fifty-fifty marriage and it isn't modern at all?

"It's the old-fashioned one where the husband is bread-winner and the wife home-maker. That's a half and half division of partnership, isn't it?

"There's something about this thing of a wife going out to work that breaks down a fellow's morale. He can have the best intentions in the world and be all around decent and square and still go slumping.

"Perhaps men aren't civilized out of the idea that supporting their wives and their homes is their prerogative. Maybe it's pride that goes down before the wife's pay-envelope.

"Anyway a man worth a darn wants to bring in the livelihood. He wants to do it himself. The wife who steals this privilege stirs up anarchy for she's upsetting the home!"

"Such a speech, Lanny!" Ione cried.

He grinned and looked rather shame-faced. "But I mean it. What would have happened to us if you hadn't come home when you did I don't know. We wouldn't have had this—been here today."

"You're glad to be here?"

"Am I! Bend down, young-un. There! 'Nother, please. I love you, sweet Io."

They started back when the world lay glowing in the sunset hush. At the road where her dream house stood—dream no longer—he pulled her arm and they turned up th hill. She stole a look beyond the picket gate, trying not to care.

The yard was cleared now; there was a look of activity about the place. Even the windows seemed to smile.

"Lan! Why—why, someone's bought it—"

"Looks so. Let's just go in—"

Up the graveled path to the wide veranda they went; over the threshold. Big old rooms in need of paper and paint, but beautiful for all that; great fire place yawning for the cheer of hearth fires.

"Oh! she sighed. Then, after a pause. "We could have put the lounge chair over there and the lamp in that corner. And—and—"

"And what, Frills? Let's pretend, can't we? Come on, now."

So they made a game of it, loitering through the rooms, arguing this and that, making a home of it in fancy.

"And this would be the guest room," she said when they had come to the second floor. "And this to the east would be ours. And this little one on the south oh, this little one—"

But she would not say what she wished for that. "I'll tell you sometime, darlingest. Sometime when our 'sometime' comes true."

"Ione—girl dearest—it's true now. This is for you." He handed her a key. "To the front door. Our home, yours and mine."

"I—why, you mean—oh, you mean—"

"I've been saving a little. No trick at all once you start. First payment's made. Had Peterson clearing up around—you're glad? Well, not going to cry? Here, now—" Laughing in a tender way, kissing tears from the blue eyes.

"I'm just to happy! I'm just—oh, my dear! We'll move in next week while the leaves are all gay to welcome us and there are autumn roses in the yard."

"Hey, forgetting something! Your ol' friend husband's inquisitive, you know. The little room, now, Frills?"

"Well—do you know I want it for—well, for a nursery. When April brings the violets, Lan—"

"Io!" He opened his arms and she came into them, star-eyed, face upraised with a still look. "Ah, the little sweet one—my little wife—"

She said, with a catch in her voice, "How about it, Lan? Hurry, now—"

"I love you, Io. Beautiful Ione. I will love you always and always."

The Prince Of Wales
His Story

private capacity before finally leaving the commonwealth.

His farewell message to the "Diggers" indicates the impression which he recorded on his great tour:

"I am very sorry that my first visit to Australia is at an end. . . . Throughout the commonwealth I have been impressed by the fact tha' the Australian people as a whole have just the same free and gallant British spirit at home which the 'Diggers' showed so splendidly during the war. . . . I refuse to say goodby. I have become so fond of Australia now that she can never be far from my thoughts wherever I may be; and I look forward most keenly to the time when I shall be able to return. My affectionate best wishes to her people, one and all."

On the way home the Prince called, among other places, at Samoa, Honolulu, Mexico, Panama, Trinidad, Demerara, Grenada, Dominica, Antigua and the Bermudas.

One dull October morning the Renown steamed into Portsmouth Harbor bringing with it the Prince, tired out, but happy in the knowledge of duty well done and well appreciated.

Chapter XVI.

The Prince in the East

THE Prince's Indian Tour was by far the most important of all his travels—for here he was to move amongst a people not strictly British by race as the Canadians, the Australians and New Zealanders. India being strictly monarchist and having Royalty and a native aristocracy of its own, the Prince traveled to India as representative of his father and with all the ceremonial which he disliked, yet he knew was as necessary now as it had been unnecessary during previous tours.

The preparations for this, the Prince's third tour, were even more careful and strenuous than had been those previous to the departure for Canada and Australasia.

He left Portsmouth on October 26, 1921, traveling again on board the RENOWN. The first duty of this tour was to open the New Maltese Parliament in Valetta.

While in the Mediterranean he also visited the Mediterranean Fleet and boarded the "Iron Duke," on which his younger brother, Prince George, was a midshipman. Here he accepted dinner in the gunroom with the other "snotties."

When, early one morning, the "Renown" slipped into Bombay Harbor, the Prince was already on the quarter-deck with his eyes fixed upon the land, in which for the next few months he was to be the central figure.

Lord Reading, the Viceroy, received His Royal Highness as he entered India amidst a scene of unrivaled splendor. Wearing white ducks with naval badges and carrying his sword in one hand the Prince saluted gravely the large crowds that had gathered to greet him. The occasion called for dignity and H. R. H. typified all the prestige of the British 'Raj.'

Safety Feared

The Prince now received in order of precedure Indian Princes, Chiefs and Officials, and then read the King's address. Speeches finished he entered the royal coach and proceeded in solmn state on a procession through the town.

During the Prince's rather short stay in Bombay his staff and the Police were a little uneasy with regard to his safety. Unfortunately at the time of the Prince's arrival Bombay was in the midst of a native upheaval.

While the police took all the precautions they could to ensure his safety the greatest safeguard was the Prince himself. With that impelling charm of manner which is the real secret of his popularity he won even the hearts of the native agitators.

Towards the end of his few days' stay in Bombay it was quite evident that the political agitators had discovered that their grudges did not lie against the handsome young white Prince. As far as was possible the Prince had disarmed criticism and offered a friendly hand, even to the agitators.

"I want to konw you all," he said, and so that he could see and be seen he stood up in his car, laughing away the fears of his guard.

The Prince's next mission was to visit Poona to lay the foundation stone of the Shiraji Memorial erected to the memory of those Indians who fell in the Great War.

"I like India," said the Prince to the Viceroy before he had been in the country many days. The Prince was determined, however, to use his own methods, to gain the hearts and friendships of native India. On one occasion after a ceremony was concluded he left his staff and mixed freely with the crowd to the apprehension of the police officers guarding him. But within a few minutes he had accomplished his purpose—he had won the hearts of the native population of India.

PRUDENCE PENNY MENUS

Menu for Sunday's Dinner

Pigeons en Casserole.
Cucumbers Stuffed with Pineapple.
Chocolate Marshmallow Cake.

SINGE and clean pigeons and cut in halves through the breast and back. Roll in flour and brown in drippings. Place in a casserole dish. Mix a tablespoonful of flour with one tablespoonful of drippings in which the pigeons were sauteed, blend, and add a cup of boiling water.

COOK until thick, pour over the pigeons and add enough boiling water so that the birds are covered. Place the casserole in the oven and bake covered one hour. Then add onions, one to a serving, and bake another hour, add potatoes, cut in quarters, carrots, cut in quarters, and a cupful of green peas, and cook another 45 minutes. You may have to add a little water from time to time, but not too much, or the gravy will be too thin.

THIS is such a complete meal that I am only going to give you this delicious new cucumber salad and a chocolate cake to fill out your menu.

Remove the centers from cucumbers and mix with an equal amount of chopped celery and grated pineapple. Pile into the cucumber boats and chill thoroughly. Blend a cream cheese with sufficient pineapple juice to make it the consistency of thick cream. Serve over the cucumbers, which have been placed on a bed of lettuce leaves.

I THINK this chocolate cake will be quite a favorite. You will need ½ cup of shortening, 1 1-3 cups of sifted brown sugar, 2 egg yolks beaten light, 4 ounces of chocolate, melted, ½ cup of sifted brown sugar, ½ cup of boiling water, ½ cup sour milk, 2½ cups wheat flour, ½ cup cornstarch, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon cloves, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 2 egg whites, beaten very light.

CREAM the shortening, beat into it half the first quantity of sugar. Beat the other half with egg yolks, then combine. Melt the chocolate over hot water and add the one-half cup of sugar and the boiling water, mix well and add to the first mixture, then the sour milk. Sift the flour with the spices, salt, soda and baking powder and add. Lastly, fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in three layers.

For the frosting, one and a half cups of granulated sugar, half cup of boiling water, three egg whites, beaten very light, half pound of fresh marshmallows, half teaspoonful of vanilla extract.

MELT sugar in boiling water, wash down sides of pan, cover and let boil three minutes; uncover and let boil until a little of the syrup dropped in cold water forms a ball. Pour syrup in a fine stream on the egg whites, beating constantly. Add marshmallows cut in quarters, flavoring and beat until cool. Use between layers and pour the remainder over the cake.

CORN FRITTERS — Two cups corn (drained); 1½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 2 or 3 eggs beaten, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon Blue Ribbon Malt Extract, (hop flavored), salt and pepper to taste.

Drain corn if very moist; if just out of the can it need not be drained, but add two tablespoons of milk. Add the Blue Ribbon Malt Extract, hop flavored, and the melted butter, and then the beaten eggs. Add the flour and baking powder which have been sifted together. Fry in deep fat until brown. Serve with a sweet sauce or syrup.

CORN MUFFINS—Seven heaping tablespoons of flour; three of cornmeal, one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons sugar, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder, three or four eggs (optional), one cup milk, one teaspoon vanilla, one tablespoon melted butter.

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Separate eggs, and beat whites to snow. Add beaten yolks to dry ingredients with milk, vanilla and melted butter. Stir well. Lastly fold in whites.

Bake in well greased tins in a moderately hot oven for 30 minutes.

LEFT-OVERS

I FIND a good many people complaining about the difficulty of serving leftover fish attractively. I have made up some very palatable dishes. Here they are for those of you who wish to try them.

BASIC RECIPE—To a cup of flaked leftover fish add an equal amount of chopped or mashed potato, one tablespoonful of chopped onion, salt, pepper and, if they happen to be handy, a tablespoonful each of chopped celery and green pepper.

You may use mashed potatoes, dip in egg and roll in breadcrumbs and fry in deep fat for fishballs.

Use mashed or chopped potatoes and fry or bake for fish hash.

Add a beaten egg and form in a loaf, sprinkle with breadcrumbs and lay strips of bacon across the top and bake in the oven and we have a fish loaf.

If there is only a small piece of fish, cut down the basic recipe accordingly. Add eggs and scramble or use as filling for an omelet.

Make a cream sauce of one tablespoonful of butter blended with one tablespoonful of flour and a cup of milk. Cook until thick and smooth and add the basic recipe either with or without potatoes.

Expect Crowd At Duquesne

By HARRY KECK,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

WITH the prospect of clearer and warmer weather, Promoter Jules Beck will make another attempt to stage his postponed boxing show at the Duquesne Steel Baseball Park tonight. He had to call it off after the boxers weighed in yesterday. At that time the weather was too threatening and chilly to permit him to take a chance of dragging out the cash customers.

Jim Sigman of Toledo, who boxes Ike McFowler, the Negro heavyweight of Johnstown, in the 10-round windup, caused a surprise when he tipped the beam at 214 pounds. McFowler weighed 187½ pounds.

Mule Brown weighed 140¼ pounds and Slambang Taylor 129¾ for the semi-final. The boxers in the other six-round preliminaries weighed as follows:

Leo Kyburski, 149, vs. Joe Louder, 149.

Young Angelo, 125, vs. Battling Gizzy, 127.

Al Waldeck, 130, vs. Bobby Burns, 127.

There is a possibility that a change will have to be made in the opening bout. Burns showed up yesterday with a bad finger, and, unless it is improved late today, a substitute will take his place on the card. The show is scheduled to get under way at 8:30.

MELLOW VS. GANS

Johnny Mellow of Detroit and California Joe Gans, the Negro lightweight of Gary, Ind., have been signed by Promoter Jim McGirr for the main bout of the opening indoor show of the fall and winter season in the Palisades roller rink, McKeesport, next Thursday night. Both are favorites with the boxing fans of the Tube City. Mellow has boxed there three times, beating Freddie Boylstein in his first appearance, then besting Dick Conlon and drawing with Cuddy DeMarco. He had Boylstein on the floor a number of times and also dropped DeMarco. Gans has boxed Joey LaGrey, Frankie Gordini and Phil Goldstein in McKeesport, losing to LaGrey in a bout in which he was fighting under a weight handicap and beating Gordini and Goldstein.

Young Jack Thompson, the California Negro welterweight, who knocked out Champion Joe Dundee in two rounds in Chicago last week, is under the management of Ray Alvis of Indianapolis, who also handles Chuck Wiggins, the veteran light-heavyweight, who will box Garfield Johnson, local Negro flash, in the windup of the opening show of the season in Motor Square Garden on the night of Monday, October 1.

Phil Goldstein, local lightweight, who boxed Frankie Ferro at New Haven last night, meets Frankie LaFay of Troy, N. Y., at Holyoke, Mass., next Tuesday night.

LINGO BOUT SET BACK

The Terry Lingo-Jack Duffy bout at Duquesne, originally scheduled for next Thursday night, has been set back to Monday night, September 17.

MID-ATLANTIC SERIES OPENS

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Sept. 7.—(AP.)—The opening game of the Middle Atlantic championship series is scheduled for Fairmont this afternoon with the Fairmont club and the Wheeling club fighting for the 1928 title.

The second game also will be played here, with the third and fourth at Wheeling. If a fifth game is necessary, the scene will be decided by the flip of a coin.

SANDLOT BASEBALL by TOM BIRKS

KING JUPITER PLUVIUS threw a wrench into the City League schedule last evening and consequently Hermes-Grove and Pleasant Valley did not get together in their second half championship fight at Dean Field, Managers Tommy Carson and Neely waited until the last minute before calling off the battle, and then agreed to play next Tuesday evening at the Bloomfield grounds.

It has been many years since a race in any Pittsburgh league has attained such a climax as the city loop has in its second half. Hermes-Grove two weeks ago appeared to have the circuit tied up tight with a good lead. Then Reliance Life put on a grandstand act down the straight away and now is only one-half game behind the Dairymen. And it seems as though the second half is going to see a playoff to decide who shall meet Book Shoe in a post-season series.

Reliance Life will practically stand or fall on the outcome of the game at Stowe Field this evening, when the Stowe team is met in the final league game of its schedule. One thing is sure, the Insurance boys are prim full of pep and this feeling naturally helps them. Manager Ottie Cochrane has Imhoff and Dutch Spencer for this battle. Gormley worked and won the Thomas game at Crafton, so that takes him out of the picture.

Should Stowe win this evening, Hermes-Grove would have to lose both the Book Shoe game on Saturday and the Pleasant Valley game next Tuesday before Reliance Life would get a playoff. But if Reliance keeps up its wonderful spurt of six straight and beats Pop Geers' outfit, then Hermes-Grove will have to win both games to cop the half. So there it is, fans, take your choice—but go out and see the remaining games.

This evening's game at Stowe will find either Saltic or Otey opposed to Imhoff or Spencer. At any rate, the fans will see a real fight. Reliance has its back to the wall and must win. Stowe takes a delight in beating all comers. The Reliance game with Thomas was a thriller, and it appeared for a time as though the Cochrane outfit was out of the race. At the end of the third frame Thomas had a two-run lead. Then, with the score tied in the sixth, Red Chenowith put on the Frank Merriwell act and knocked the ball out of the orchard with two men on and two out.

Manager Cochrane made an effort to have this evening's game transferred to Saturday afternoon, but Geer had advertised the battle. Cochrane wanted to get in a nine-inning game. Both managers should see that the game should start at 6:30 sharp, as darkness sets in pretty early at this time. The Hermes-Grove game with Pleasant Valley Tuesday will start at 6 o'clock.

SQUIRES EASY FOR STRIBLING

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(INS.)—Billy Stribling, of Georgia, has advanced another step in heavyweight ranks today as a result of his victory over Johnny Squires, of South Africa, in the second round of their bout at Madison Square Garden last night.

Lou Magnolia, the referee, stepped in during the second round and stopped the match to save Squires from a severe drubbing. The South African was outclassed from the start and failed to get in a blow.

The bell saved Squires in the first round after Stribling had floored him twice. At the beginning of the second, Squires, groggy, toppled to the mat with the first left hook Stribling landed. The South African arose gamely, but Referee Magnolia stopped the bout at the end of 44 seconds of the round.

Gene Baker, of Johnstown, Pa., knocked out Johnny Kreiger, of Jersey City, in the first round, and Marvin Schector, of Boston, won the decision over Marco Polo, of Pittsburgh, in a four-round bout.

CLOSING AUTO RACE CARDED

The 1928 automobile racing season in the Greater Pittsburgh district will come to a close tomorrow afternoon when the Keystone Recreation Corporation stages its last two events of the year at the famous Bridgeville Speedway, one of the best half-mile board tracks in the country.

Tomorrow's races, one of 75 miles and the other of 25 miles, were originally scheduled to take place on Labor Day afternoon, but were postponed when a heavy downpour just before the start made the track too treacherous to attempt racing.

District Varsity Squads Drill

CAMP HAMILTON, WINDBER, Pa., Sept. 7.—It is the calm before the storm up here at the mountain training camp of the Pitt Panther football squad.

The calm, represented by a conventional routine of calisthenics, forward passing drill, mixed in with some spirited tackling and charging practice. Yesterday, the schedule did not vary from that of Wednesday, and spirits were dampened somewhat by inclement weather. A stiff, chilling breeze and frequent showers swept across the camp, huddled in a narrow valley.

The storm referred to is the stiff scrimmages which will be a daily feature of the training menu during the remainder of the camp. The competition will start tomorrow, continuing until camp is broken one week later. This storm will find 36 Panther candidates battling for places on the first eleven, and it may be that more experienced players who Sutherland has been counting on for his varsity will be displaced by sophomores, or dark horses.

The first game with Thiel College is only three weeks in the offing, and the scrimmages will comprise a series of stiff elimination contests to determine the lineup for the opening game. Eddie Baker, of Nanticoke, who reported Wednesday, was used at center on the first team yesterday. This move was not unexpected, as Baker showed up well during spring training.

WASH-JEFF

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 7.—With the arrival of Paul Shaw, of Apollo, a halfback who showed promising development in the spring practice, the Washington and Jefferson College gridiron squad is practically complete and Head Coach Andy Kerr is driving the players, rain or shine, in an effort to mold an eleven for the coming campaign.

Shaw, a senior, did not report for practice until last spring, but showed up so well that he is being conceded a place on the varsity squad by close followers of the Presidents.

Behm, a stalwart lineman from Evans City, was in togs yesterday for the first time. He is one of the biggest men on the team, but has never found himself.

PENN STATE

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Sept. 7.—With all except one or two of the late arrivals in camp, Penn State football candidates settled down to a steady drilling today on a practice program calculated to bring the squad up to playing form by the time of the first game a little more than three weeks away.

The first days of this week, following the opening sessions Saturday, have been spent in rather lengthy drills, chiefly on fundamentals. Head Coach Bezdek has been giving personal attention to passing and kicking drills for the backfield men, with Bob Higgins and Red Griffiths taking charge of the linemen when the squad is split up for individual instruction.

Fight Results

At New York—W. L. (Young) Stribling knocked out (technical) Johnny Squires, 2 rounds; Jake Warren won over Paul Swidarski when latter was disqualified, 4 rounds; Marvin Schecter defeated Marco Polo, 4 rounds; George Hoffman knocked out Jack Dessimos, 4 rounds; Big John Erickson defeated Charley Wepner, 4 rounds; Al Walker defeated Bunkey Hill, 4 rounds; Gene Baker knocked out Johnny Kriger, 1 round.

At Chicago—Rene De Vos defeated Cowboy Jack Willis, 10 rounds; Marty Gallagher defeated Tom Sayers, 5 rounds; Battling Levinsky defeated Jimmy Gardner, 4 rounds.

At New Haven—Billy Wallace defeated Joey Kaufman, 10 rounds.

WESTMINSTER TO MEET ST. FRANCIS ELEVEN

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 7.—Westminster college will meet St. Francis college on the gridiron at Offutt Field here on Saturday, October 31, it was announced here today.

PURDY LOST TO REDS

CINCINNATI, Sept. 7.—(INS.)—Pid Purdy, outfielder of the Cincinnati Reds, is out of the game for the rest of the season as the result of an injury to his knee received when he ran into a bleacher in Boston recently, it was learned today. Purdy's injury may be permanent, according to Dr. J. Hagen, physician for the Reds.

NEW GARB

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Notre Dame may have its silk football pants, but Fordham University will wear one-piece suits resembling overalls.

CHILLY SAUCE By CHILLY DOYLE

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 7.—Ervin Brame, who stopped off in Indianapolis, has another good report on Steve Swetonic, of the North Side, who pitched a four-hit victory Tuesday against Louisville. Steve has won something like 17 games. Brame, as stated before in this column, has a high regard for Steve. It would not be a great surprise if he should land with the Pirates in view of the friendly connections between the Pirates and Hoosiers.

Among those at yesterday's contest was Dan Howley, manager of the Browns. Dan called at the camp of the Pirates to visit with Donie Bush and Oscar Stanage, whom he has known for many years. Howley appears to have had all the better of the big winter deal with Detroit. His Brownies have third place almost clinched while the Bengals may be lucky to escape the cellar position.

Yesterday was a big day for the parents of Fred Brickell, star outfield recruit of the Pirates. Ma and Pa Brickell, accompanied by their daughter and her husband, drove all the way from their Wichita home to see Fred in action. They occupied seats near the Pirate bench and had a fine time.

Sparky Adams added eight chances to his unbroken string yesterday, thereby sending his record total to 235.

Paul Waner was able to hold to his batting leadership on the merit of his homer, although this was his only safety in four jousts with Mitchell. The four-sacker seemed to take the starch out of the Redbirds, coming as it did with one out the ninth and on top of a disputed play.

I paid $10 at retail for the original of this hat. It was made by a High Price Manufacturer and sold by a High Price Retailer. $10

I reproduced the exact "Style Twin" of this popular high price hat at $3.50. The block and flange are the same and the measurements of the crown and brim are identical. $3.50

"Twins of the Most Expensive Styles Seen in the Most Exclusive Shops"

My Style Policy

is to make a "Style Twin" of every exclusive Style Leader shown in the high price shops.

Every new high price style introduced for $8, $10, $12 or more, is Public Property just as soon as it is shown in a window, or sold in a store. My Policy is to buy the hat and duplicate the style exactly for $3.50.

I have asked all our managers in every city in U. S. A. where we have a store, to send me by air, wire or mail any new high price style they want reproduced for $3.50.

As Far As Style Goes

When you remove the Pricemarks, Trademarks, Hallmarks and Earmarks, they are "Style Twins"—you can't tell them apart.

Some people think that if they pay more money, they get more Style, but I'll challenge anyone to look at any crowd of well dressed men and tell what they paid for their hats.

My customers don't want a "$3.50 Style". They want a $10 Style for $3.50. That's why I'm reproducing high price styles for $3.50.

As Far As Quality Goes

I've got more than a million satisfied customers and I know I can satisfy you.

As a matter of fact, I don't believe anybody has any trouble about the wear of a good hat. The trouble is, it isn't half worn out when it isn't fit to wear.

The worst looking hats you see on the street at the beginning of the season are last year's high price hats that the owners are trying to wear out their money's worth.

HARPER HERO AS BUCS LOSE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 7.—Straw hats are becoming and comfortable headgear in St. Louis in September, but a lot of the town's best citizens today were in search of their autumn derbies as a result of George Harper's home run smash in the tenth inning of yesterday's masterpiece between the Pirates and Cardinals. A moment before the pinch-hitter parked the ball in the right-field stands, the Freebooters had the victory by a one-run margin, but the picture was turned completely around when George's rocket disappeared in the stands, Jimmy Wilson also riding in on the round tripper.

The sock was so sudden and unexpected that the fans and Cardinals did not recover until Harper was half way around the paths on his joyful excursion. When Harper arrived at the plate under the barrage of fading skimmers he found a big reception committee composed of fans and players who wanted to carry the hero of the hour off the field. His drive won the initial contest of the important series, 4 to 3.

WANER GETS HOMER

Paul Waner slammed a homer into the same section in the ninth with one out, the hit forcing a deadlock at this late hour. Sprout Waner registered on Brother Paul's sock, the two tallies offsetting two markers which Chick Hafey gave his team by hitting a homer into the left field stands in the fifth. The three homers were high spots in the game, yet there were two singles hooked together in the tenth by Pete Scott and Burleigh Grimes, which gave the Bushwhackers the lead.

The excitement will be resumed this afternoon with Remy Kremer and Jess Haines due to fight it out on the mound.

Clarence Mitchell and Grimes were at their best as they entertained 12,000 fans who came out to see the opening clash. Exclusive spitball duels are very scarce in these days of advanced baseball, but the two veterans of many years certainly did dish out a classic.

Mitchell and Grimes were in such control that the first 18 batters to step to the barrier were turned back. Sparky Adams then broke the monotony for the Pirates with a single in the fourth while Frankie Frisch beat out a hit in the same inning to put the first Redbird on base.

SPARKY GETS SORE

Jim Bottomley walked at the start of the fifth. The crowd was in a delirium when Chick Hafey drove the rocket high and far into the left field seats, the two-run advantage seeming to have the ticket of victory, especially after Adams had been retired in the ninth.

His team runless up to the ninth, Adams played out the string and

SPORT COMMENT

Harper Pulls Baseball Rarity to Beat Pirates—Failure Against Cards Has Cost Bucs Pennant Chance—Cleghorn May Pilot Les Canadiens—Three Olympic Stars in Police Meet Tomorrow.

ORDINARILY the Pirates might be considered almost sure winners when leading by one run in the enemy half of an extra inning, with one out and Burleigh Grimes pitching, but even a nine-out-of-ten chance will not hold good for the Bushmen these days.

George Harper.

One of the most unusual things in baseball is a home run by a pinch-hitter In an extra inning that drives in another runner and wins a game after the other side has taken the lead, and George Harper's success in pulling that feat against the Bucs in St. Louis yesterday shows that such generally weighty items as percentage and the law of average are mere trivialities where a pennant-bound club is concerned.

INABILITY to cope successfully with the one club that they had to beat in order to create a pennant chance for themselves is the main reason why the Bucs have not attained a higher position.

Out of 19 games played with the Cardinals thus far the Pittsburgh team has won only five. At Forbes Field the Rovers took only three out of 11, and in the Mound City they have won only two out of eight. If they had made an average show-

LOCAL SPORTSMAN HURT IN CRASH AT STONEBORO

D. H. Shull, Hazelwood, owner of the young trotting mare, Verton's Wager, suffered a broken ankle when he was thrown from the sulky at Stoneboro, in the last heat of the racing program of the fair, Wednesday.

He was driving the pacing mare, Silent Lou, for her owner, A. M. Leib, and was trailing behind the Indiana-owned mare, Little Jill, who struck a soft spot in the track and fell.

TARTANS HEAVY, FAST AND AMBITIOUS

By JESS M. CARVER.

YOU may leave the Tartan football team of Carnegie Tech out of your repertoire of Scotch jokes for this fall. Otherwise, the joke will be on you.

Pittsburgh rode triumphantly to the top of the national football heap last year on the shoulders of Pitt's great eleven. This year the chances are that we'll go as far, proudly waving the Tartan banner of Carnegie Tech; on the brawn and brain of over three tons of Skibo gridiron warriors, led by the incomparable Howard Harpster, a certain bet for all-America honor as a quarterback, and directed by the cunning of Judge Walter P. Steffen, of Chicago, advisory coach, and Head Coach Robert Waddell.

It is unfair to the Tech coaches and players to make their task of taking from a hard schedule a successful season by setting forth here and now that they should travel their rocky road without misshap. The Tartans are fair and square about admitting that they have a great squad and glowing prospects. There are only five or six veterans and letter men on the squad, but the class of the sophomore material is such that it may be reckoned, and without reservation, as the finest that ever reported to a Tech coach. But possible injuries and the obstacles as presented by five hard games in a row on the schedule my take a disappointing toll.

PROSPECTS BRIGHT

In brief—the Tartans may anticipate, and do anticipate one of the most successful seasons in the history of the school. For the first time, they appear to be the pre-season class of the district, and are likely to remain so until the close.

Steffen and Waddell have the ideal combination of beef, speed and brains on the 34-man squad. Beside looking forward to a line that will average within a pound or two of 200, the bosses are counting on a backfield that will approach 180 pounds.

With Harpster to direct this machine, to punt, pass and run as only Harpster can—the boys can write their own tickets.

The Tartans average 180 pounds with most of the weight on the line. As I have pointed out in a previous paragraph, the men who will step into the four or five vacant places on the forward wall are of such class that they would be varsity timber for any eleven. You can't keep men like Dreshar, Highberger, Schnupp, Netherland, Rosensweig, Stabanu and Booth out of the lineup forever.

THE ENDS

Tech lost John English, a good end, through his being ineligible. Tony Sweet, Shaughency and Kousman are left of the wingman who saw service last year and the season previous. They have their work cut out for them in winning berths in the face of the determined bids that will be made by Rosensweig and Stabanu of last years frosh. These boys are certain to serve a great portion of the time at the end jobs.

THE TACKLES

At the tackles, Schmidt, a real veteran, will be a ranking favorite to retain his position. Last year, due to the dearth of material, he took instructions prior to each game for left tackle, left guard and left end. This year he will need to worry over but one position.

Other candidates are Helmbold, an Oliver High lad and a husky one; Schnupp, he of the great hands; Yarina, former Bellefonte star. This outfit averages—get this now—198 pounds. Whew!

THE GUARDS

Eight huskies, averaging 195 pounds, are chewing nails and each others ears in the fight for the guard positions. Saul Meilzer, who played both guard and center last year and the year before, a big 220-pounder, won't have to worry about playing out of position at center as he did last year and by giving all his thought and time to the guard job, may turn out to be a better lineman than ever before. Bob Netherland, 215 pounds, from Beaver High; Booth, 195 pounds, of South Hills; Helmbold, a 200-pounder, from Oliver; Don Lovewell, a veteran from Toledo, weighing 195; Marshall, 185 on the hoof, from Avalon; Nunnally, Youngstown South; and Young of Wilkinsburg compose the guard candidate list.

THE CENTERS

The Plaid is going to be well off for centers. Dresher of Mars, Pa., High, looms as the most likely candidate for the job. Dresher weighs 185 and is rated a "smart" football player. He has speed, class and drive.

Bowser, former Kiski star, will be a capable understudy to Dresher, and for that matter, Steffen and Waddell can toss Mellziner into the spot should either of the other two suffer an injury.

THE BACKS

So much for the line. In the backfield, Harpster can be counted upon for the quarterback post. There is little chance for argument there. As far as the remaining positions are concerned, there will be numerous combinations possible.

John Karcis, of Monaca, the 225-pound fullback, with a punch like a mule's kick, fast and a good passer and fine defensive back, will very likely develope into the big gun of the defense. Fast-running halfbacks are to be had in Moorehead, Stauffer and Kennedy of last year's team and in Eyth and Hilty, T. Flannagan, Morbito, Traa and Carlson from last year's Freshman eleven. Cyril Letzeiter, fullback on the 1927 varsity, can work with Karcis—and how he can work. There are few faster starting backs in the country than Cy.

One of the things that is causing Steffen and Waddell so much joy is the reserve material that they will have on hand. In past years, the Skibos have been hard pressed for replacements—in fact this has been one of the biggest weaknesses at Tech during the past five or six seasons.

Despite the fact there are five

The Tartans will be led in action this fall by Howard Harpster, the quarterback and kicking star, who is a real candidate for all-America honors. He figures to be the outstanding player of the district if he is fortunate enough to escape injuries.

NATIONAL LEAGUE'S DOUBLEHEADER CARD HEAVY

It Seems You've Got to Have the Cards to Win

★ SUN-TELEGRAPH ★ SPORTS ★

JESS TO VIE WITH TEX

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Jess McMahon, who has retired as matchmaker at Madison Square Garden, set himself up in the promotion end of the fight "racket" yesterday. McMahon qualified as Tex Rickard's chief rival for the indoor season by leasing the New York Coliseum for 10 years.

PLAYOFFS OF MANY CONTESTS BOOKED

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—Announcement today by the National League of dates set for playing postponed and tie games to and including games of September 6, maps out a busy four days for the Giants in Boston next week. The New York Nationals are booked to meet the Boston Braves eight times in four days, with double-headers scheduled for September 10, 11, 12 and 13.

Boston fans will have three other bargain days in September.

The Cincinnati Reds will play doubleheaders there on the nineteenth and twentieth and Pittsburgh on September 24.

Philadelphia will have five doubleheaders at home, with Boston today and tomorrow, Brooklyn Monday and Tuesday and St. Louis Saturday.

The Giants will play a double bill with Brooklyn Saturday and the Pirates will invade Flatbush for two games, September 27.

The Giants have only one doubleheader booked at home, but that may be an important engagement when the Cardinals visit the Polo Grounds September 29.

Cincinnati will play off a postponed game with the Pirates at Pittsburgh September 14 on an open date.

The game scheduled for Pittsburgh at Brooklyn September 28 was moved up and played May 13.

LONG'S SPORT COMMENT

ing in those 19 contests Bush's ballers would be near the top of the heap today.

YESTERDAY'S victory carried the Redbirds another step nearer to the flag. If they only break even in their remaining 22 games, it will be necessary for the Giants, their closest rivals, to win 18 out of 26 contests, a gait of .692, to beat them out.

Under the same conditions Pittsburgh would have to win 19 out of 21 to finish first.

BURLEIGH GRIMES is having a tough time trying to put over his twenty-third victory and draw nearer to the goal of 25 wins for the year. When he lost to Clarence Mitchell yesterday he suffered his third defeat in his last four games, and his fourth in the last six. Mitchell, incidentally, has more than vindicated the judgment of Bill McKechnie in picking up the 37-year-old southpaw spitballer when the latter appeared to be all washed up. For one thing he has beaten the Pirates three times, two of the games being 10-inning affairs, and has given them only eight runs all told. In his last four complete games, only 10 runs have been scored against Mitchell. Four of his six defeats since he joined the Cards were administered by such scores at 2 to 1 by the Cubs, 3 to 2 by the Giants, and 3 to 2 and 3 to 1 by the Robins.

Clarence Mitchell.

WHEN the Pittsburgh hockey team disbanded at the close of last season it was rumored that Manager Odie Cleghorn would no longer be connected with it, whether the outfit played here or elsewhere in the 1928-29 race, but would be appointed pilot of Les Canadiens.

Odie Cleghorn.

That rumor is still going the rounds and gathering strength. Word comes from Canada that reliable, though unverified, reports there say that Cleghorn is slated to handle Les Canadiens next season, and that in Montreal it is being taken for granted he will be on the job when the new campaign opens.

ACCORDING to Alfred Dayton, of New York, who has been investigating the hockey situation, Cecil Hart, leader of the Les Canadiens last winter, is not to be released, but will be retained in another capacity while Cleghorn takes his place at the helm.

Neither Cleghorn nor Leo Dandurand, head of the club, would confirm or deny the report when questioned as to its authenticity, it is said, but they are known to be close friends, and their failure to deny the rumor is taken to mean that it is not without foundation.

IT'S a long way from Amsterdam to Pittsburgh, but the tenth annual track and field meet of the Bureau of Police at The Stadium tomorrow will be given a touch of 1928 Olympic coloring by the appearance of three of the outstanding stars of the recent great world's athletic games in Holland.

Big King, of Lima, O., who won the high jump in Amsterdam, and who is the national record holder in this event with a mark of 6 feet 6⅝ inches, will not be the only Olympic champion to show in tomorrow's carnival.

RAY BARBUTI, of Syracuse University, victor in the 400-meter in 47 4-5 seconds, and the only member of the American men's team to win a track event, will be seen in a 300-yard exhibition run, and Miss Lillian Copeland, of Pasadena, Cal., who won second place in the discus throw for women with a toss of 300 meters, will also appear.

Ray Barbuti.

Miss Copeland ranks among the leading girl athletes of the world. She established the present women's national A. A. U. records for the eight-pound shot-put, the discus throw and the javeline throw.

NOT since the junior and senior national A. A. U. championship track and field meets were held at Forbes Field on June 30 and July 1, 1911, have such world-famed athletic stars been seen in action here. On that occasion lovers of track sports in this district were privileged to witness the cracking of records by champions from all parts of the country, including Martin Sheridan, Mel Sheppard, Abel Kiviat, Platt Adams, Dan Ahearne, Matt McGrath, Pat McDonald, Howard Drew, George Bonhag, Gwinn Henry, Harry Grumpelt, who broke a high jump mark that had stood since 1897, and many others who were numbered among the world's topliners at that time.

Kremer to Meet Haines

had a three-and-two count when Sir William Klem, one of the finest in his line, called Sparky out on a questionable pitch. Adams recorded his worst protest as a Pirate and ended by throwing his bat against the stands, so sure was he that the ball was wide.

L. Waner bunted to Holm, who threw low to Bottomley. Sunny Jim fell on his face and made a wonderful catch of the ball, but Umpire Jorda gave Sprout the close decision, despite a protest. Up came Punch 'Em Paul and in the next moment the contest was tied up tighter than a drum. Paul's homer also scored Sprout.

The Redbirds were blanked in their half. Pete Scott opened the extra round with a single to center. Dick Bartell tried to bunt, but he popped to Mitchell. Mitchell threw wide to first in trying for a double play and Pete rushed to second. Maranville tossed out Hargreaves as Pete advanced, and Grimes whacked out a fine single to left, scoring Peterkin.

Jimmy Wilson pried off the home half with a lucky hit to right. Bartell made a wild dive in an effort to catch the short loft. Andy High batted for Maranville and flied to L. Waner.

semi-final to the Willie Davies-Luis Carpentero bout at the Jolly Bowl, New Castle, next Monday night. Terry McManus is matched with Tony Canzoni, Tommy O'Leary with Johnny Haggerty and George Compton with Young Corsey in the other preliminaries.

Johnny Risko and Bearcat Wright meet at Omaha tonight.

AMATEUR BOUTS TONIGHT

Six amateur boxing bouts are listed for tonight in German-Masonic hall, North Side, for the benefit of the West View football club.

An abscessed tooth has caused Johnny Vivio, Bloomfield welterweight, to pass up bouts at Duquesne and Pitcairn. He will be ready for action again shortly.

Cuddy DeMarco boxes Bucky Lawless, at Erie, tonight.

James (Red) Mason, veteran local manager, is sojourning in Chicago and will remain there for some time.

Pete Latzo and Leo Lomski meet in a return bout in Detroit tonight. Latzo won the first bout in Brooklyn, on a foul. Tommy Grogan and Jack Duffy box the semi-final.

CARNEGIE TECH

tough games in succession on the card, the string of major battles broken by an idle Saturday on November 3, the Skibo card is well arranged. It is just the sort of a schedule needed to give a good team national ranking should it crash through undefeated.

SCHEDULE STIFF ONE

Tech meets New York University and Lou Little's Georgetown eleven as representative Eastern teams. Both will rank high in seaboard circles this fall, and triumphs at their expense will boost the stock of the Tartans.

In the Middle West, Notre Dame will furnish the opposition. A victory over Notre Dame means the works in any league. This game looms as one of the biggest intersectional struggles of the entire season.

Wash-Jeff and Pitt furnish the major Tri-State opposition. These games are always naturals—and will be more so this year in that the Plaid will be seeking revenge for 1927 defeats.

The season opens with Westminster at Youngstown. Then the Ashland O., College team will be here for a game at Forbes Field. Then will provide the final warming up attraction at Forbes Field on October 13 before Wash-Jeff, Pitt, Georgetown, Notre Dame and New York U. are met in the order named.

ends tenderface

New!

A shaving cream with double-dense lather

—completely lubricates skin, giving smoother shaves. Soothes and heals, too

HERE'S a shaving cream that is absolutely different from any you have ever used. Lifebuoy Shaving Cream ends tenderface—by removing the cause.

Friction, or the rough scraping of razor over skin is a chief cause of tenderface. The only way to end this friction is by complete lubrication.

Ordinary lather cannot do this. It is too light and frothy. Lifebuoy's healing double-dense lather, however, hugs the skin so closely that a thoroughly lubricated shaving surface is formed.

Result—no tugging—no pulling—no burning, no smarting! You get a marvelously clean shave—yet your razor scarcely seems to touch you.

Then, too—Lifebuoy Shaving Cream contains the same antiseptic ingredient as the famous Lifebuoy Health Soap. Keeps skin clear, smooth, healthy—and helps protect against infection. Truly a shaving cream and face lotion in one. Get the big red tube today.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

Standard Sanitary Continues to Prosper; Three Factories Being Built in Germany—Origin of Stock Market.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

SALES of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company are continuing in as large a volume as in the first half of the year when net profit of $3,701,432 was reported. This was equivalent to $1,11 a share on the common stock. Building operations are at a high rate so that the outlook for the remainder of the year is good.

IT seems quite likely that Standard Sanitary's net profit for the entire year of 1928 will be equal to, if not better than in 1927. In that year net after all charges was $7,820,012, which was equivalent to $2.31 a share. Net in the first half of 1928 was $8298,191 more than in the corresponding period of 1927.

CONSTRUCTION work has been started on the three factories units being built in the Ruhr district in Germany. Several million dollars will be spent on expansion in that country. Eventually arrangements will be made to supply the entire European market and factories may be built at other points. The German plants will aid in competing in the South American markets since the advantage of low wages can be secured. The company will be able to complete the expansion program without any outside financing.

A WIDE margin of earnings over dividend requirements on the common stock which is on an annual basis of $1.68 a share has been shown. Dividends have been paid on the common stock in every year since 1904. The present dividend rate was established in May of this year following the splitting of the old stock on a three for one basis.

STANDARD SANITARY has no funded debt. The only capital obligation prior to the common stock is $4,786,400 of 7 per cent noncumulative preferred stock.

A visitor to the gallery of the New York Stock Exchange recently asked, "Why do they call memberships seats when there isn't a chair in the place?"

THE term, a seat on the exchange, had its origin in the early history of the institution. A book published shortly after the Civil War describes the methods of doing business at that time in great detail.

The members, properly clad in top hats, frock coats and ponderous dignity, met in a large chamber where there actually were seats. Instead of maintaining a continuous open market in all stocks as at present the names of the stocks were read in alphabetical order. As each name was called the brokers having businesss to transact made their bids or offers and an official acted as auctioneer in concluding the sales. When trading activity ended in one stock others were called until the list was completed.

RIGID rules of conduct were enforced. Any trader who rose from his seat during the heat of trading and casually knocked his neighbor's five gallon hat off was subject to a fine.

OBVIOUSLY there was only time for two or three calls of the entire list a day. As the security business grew the system became inadequate and another group of brokers began to meet in the corridor. These maintained an open market in all stocks as at present. A large fee was imposed for the use of the corridor for trading. Out of this grew the present form of a floor with posts designated as meeting places for trading in the various stocks.

MARKET GOES WILD, STOCKS SKYROCKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP.)—A sweeping advance in prices, which carried nearly two score issues to record high levels on gains running from 2 to nearly 20 points, was Wall street's response today to the unexpectedly small increase of $54,000,000 in Federal Reserve brokers' loans. Trading was in enormous volume, with the ticker half an hour or more behind the market during the early part of the session.

Call money held steady at 7½ per cent despite the calling of more than $20,000,000 in bank loans. Easier call money rates were widely predicted for next week when the return flow of September 1 dividend and interest payments is completed. The market apparently paid no attention to the relatively high rate of 4½ per cent on the new United States Treasury financing, although it was generally construed as indicating relatively firm money rates for the next few months. The decline in sterling to a new low level for the year revived hopes of an early resumption of gold shipments from abroad.

Montgomery Ward was the sensational feature, soaring 19½ points to a new peak at 242 and then falling back several points on profit-taking. So swift was the advance in this stock and so late the ticker that the price was quoted on the tape around 229 when the record high was being established on the floor. Timken Roller Bearing, Motor Products, International Nickle, Sears-Roebuck, Rossia Insurance, Purity Baking common and preferred, Electric Auto Lite and Case Threshing all advanced 4½ to 8½ points to record high prices.

Similar gains were recorded by Wright, Radio, Midland Steel Products preferred, Adams Express, American Sugar Refining, Warner Bros. A, A. M. Byers, American Tobacco B and Curtiss, although they did not reach new high ground.

Briggs Manufacturing ran up to a new high on a tremendous turnover on reports of unusually large orders from Ford, Chrysler and other large automobile manufacturers. U. S. Steel common attained a new peak at 158 and was accompanied into new high ground by Republic, Otis and Central Alloy Steels and McKeesport Tin Plate. Oils ran into further profit-taking, but Tidewater Associated bettered its previous 1928 high.

TIDAL OSAGE ADVANCES IN PITTSBURGH MARKET

United Engineering and Foundry common moved up rapidly for a substantial gain in the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. Interest in this issue has been increasing lately and there have been recent indications of accumulation. The stock opened ½ higher at 44½ and was bid up to 46½ in the early movement.

Tidal Osage Oil opened at 21, a gain of three points over the previous transaction. Carnegie Metals was off a trifle in the early dealings. May Drug Company shares sold at a slightly higher figure. Arkansas Natural Gas prefered opened a shade lower. Lone Star Gas was unchanged.

Trading was carried on at a scale considerably below the volume of yesterday's transactions. The unsettled condition of the New York market was believed partly responsible for the quiet condition locally.

Carnegie Metals was firm around 21, but purchases were in limited volume. William Zoller common sold higher at 51. There was some trading in the Pittsburgh Brewing stocks at issues which were little changed from the previous sales.

Tech Aviation Course Is Look Into Future

The addition of a course in aviation engineering to the curriculum of Carnegie Institute of Technology reflects the tendency of higher institutions of learning to keep abreast with the trend of the times. Our young people want to learn about the science and technique of aviation and their demand is to be met with a four-year undergraduate course, which will fit them for a specialized post-graduate year and a degree of aeronautical engineer.

Aviation is "in the air." Just now nearly two score of airplanes are engaged in a cross country aerial derby, coast-to-coast. We had them here for brief stops at Bettis Field. Entries are from all parts of the country, including Pittsburgh and Bradford, a comparatively small Pennsylvania city. This indicates the growth of the airplane, which can be likened to that of the automobile, possession of which in its infancy was a matter of pride in a small town. Now all towns are trying to get on the aerial map.

In just a few years airplane plants will be almost as great a factor in adding to the prosperity of the nation as the automobile now is. Work makes prosperity. Everybody wants an automobile. Nearly everybody must work to get one—and we all get them. They are an incentive to work in addition to the labor they provide for millions. It will be the same with the airplane. Then is when the wisdom of Tech will become evident. Aeronautical engineers will be in demand. Tech will give many of them to the new industry. At commencement time this year representatives of many industries came to Pittsburgh to interview Tech graduates. In four years they will be after our young technicians of aviation.

Roadway Bridge Strong But Shows Some Faults

We are told that the defects found in the Mt. Washington roadway bridge do not impair its strength. A preliminary inspection which indicated the same finding has been confirmed by a report on laboratory tests of core borings, which has been placed in the hands of Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works.

The report makes recommendations for the improvement of the concrete masonry which no doubt will be adopted as a measure to prevent disintegration.

One part of the report states that the placing of certain reinforcement made practically impossible the avoidance of defects in the concrete mass. Another cites the flatness of spalls as a preventive of the effective flowing of mortar. In the future specifications should cover such matters. It is excusable to make a mistake once, but it would be criminal to make the same one twice.

How to Stop Bootlegging

Let Bootleggers "Sell" Their Customers.

Government agents in Philadelphia, seizing $75,000 worth of wines, etc., also secured a list of "distinguished" customers of the bootleggers.

If the government really wanted to stop bootlegging, it could do so simply enough.

Make it a felony to buy alcoholic liquor from a bootlegger, with fine and imprisonment, always BOTH, for the bootlegger's customers; and let half the fine go to the informer, with immunity to the informing bootlegger.

That would soon kill bootlegging. For every bootleg customer would be at the blackmailing mercy of his bootlegger. In preference to enduring that situation, the customer would drink water.

The bootleggers, comparatively few, can bribe those that interfere with them. The customers number millions. Frighten THEM, and you would stop the trade.

It WON'T be done, of course, because there is no real intention to stop the trade.

The country is perfectly willing to pass prohibition laws that will keep the Southern Negro from getting his gin, and the Northern workman from getting his beer.

There is no intention of keeping the Southern GENTLEMAN from getting his whisky, or the Northern CAPITALIST from getting his champagne. That would be "going too far."

Don't Go Bareheaded

Bad for Your Brains and Your Hatter.

An American who advocates "more hair and less straw," meaning, no hats on human heads, wants Mussolini to help his "bare-head" campaign.

Mussolini won't do it, if he knows anything about the harmful effects of constant bombardment of the skull by the actinic rays.

A Senegambian, with very thick, tightly curled, jet black hair, plenty of mutton fat rubbed in it, can stand the hot sun's rays for a while. But even he is safer with his head covered, and wears a heavy turban when he can afford it.

Going bareheaded continuously in the hot sun, is foolish, especially for blonds and all those that lack thick coating of dark hair, even in our temperate climate.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The Moon World

SITTING in the late twilight of an exquisitely clear summer evening in a tree-shaded garden on the shore of the little River Tille, in vine-clad Burgundy, we ceased talking in order to admire in charmed silence the extreme beauty of the moon. She was then at her first quarter, and shining in the Southern heavens with a silvery splendor that was enhanced by the deepening blue of the sky, from which the last faint rays of the sunken sun were fast withdrawing.

We had been speaking of Jules Verne, and most appropriately the moon came into view to recall the story of his imaginary adventurers who tried to visit that mysterious world in a huge hollow projectile. Then we spoke of the recent discussion in France of the possibility of men actually going to the moon, not shot out of a giant cannon as the great writer of cosmic romances imagined, but carried up, through swiftly, yet gently, by a multi-charge rocket.

Presently one of the little party inquired about the size of the moon, as compared with the earth. He was told that the moon's diameter is 2,160 miles, that of the earth being 7,920 miles.

"Then that straight line that we see there bordering the eastern side of the half moon must be over two thousand miles long!" he exclaimed. "But how short it looks to us here."

"Yes, it does look surprisingly short for its 2,000-mile length, but you should remember its distance. The moon is about 239,000 miles from the earth, or say 235,000 miles from the place where we sit on the earth's surface, and that is about one hundred and nine times the moon's diameter. But that line which looks so straight is really a curve, a half-circle, belting the moon and swelling out toward us, so that it actually runs over 3,332 miles of the lunar surface. It is half of a hemisphere of the moon that we see there flattened against the sky. It includes an area of the lunar surface amounting to about 3,695,000 square miles—yet, as it hangs shining on high you can hide it all behind the end of a pencil. You are looking at an area greater than the whole of the United States, yet it covers only that tiny patch on the sky.

"Part of it, of course, you see at a very low angle, just as you do the edge of a globe sloping away from your eye, but the central part is presented squarely to your line of sight."

"What IS there, anyway, up there on the moon?" suddenly asked one of the party. "Suppose we could get there, would we find anything worth while?"

"You might find diamonds! The moon appears full of ancient volcanic necks, and you will remember that it was a volcanic neck long ago cooled off which made the dazzling fortune of South Africa. On the moon there are some peak-ringed craters that gleam in the telescope like jewels of fire. Some think they may be full of brilliant minerals whose facets reflect the sunshine. What a fortune for the first astronaut who reaches the moon and is able to return in his rocket laden with the treasures of that spherical island in the sky! But one who goes to the moon must carry his atmosphere with him. He will find nothing to breathe there.

"Chemistry will take care of that," said another, "and of the food problem, too, for I suppose there is nothing good to eat growing on the moon!"

"I don't know about that. There are suspicious appearances in certain places on the moon which some persons take to be indications of the existence of vegetation. Careful study shows a great variety of faint colorations in the lunar landscapes, which some amateur astronomer might take up for study and immortalize himself.

Speaking of Languages

THE head of the Russian Foreign Office converses fluently in seven languages. The average American speaks but one, and that often mumblingly.

President MacCracken, of Vassar, home from Europe, brings the opinion that in another generation or two the use of English will be world-wide. Presumably he means American English. Since we will not learn the languages of others, and others must borrow our money and buy our goods, the assumption doubtless is that they will master our way of speech.

Wouldn't it be more courteous for us to meet them half way?

Beware of Chance Acquaintances

DON'T be deluded into the thought that persons who smile easily are necessarily to be trusted.

Usually a frank smile denotes a good character, but there are so many exceptions that it is not safe to bank on the idea.

One of the most important qualifications of a flim-flammer is to put up a good appearance.

He must be able to convince his proposed victims of his sincerity and reliability.

Perhaps you migrated from a small city or a little village to the metropolis.

You desire companionable acquaintances.

It is easy for you to meet those whom you should not know.

There are real students of the game of chicanery who will hold off for a time to impress you with an idea of their exclusiveness.

The big cities attract experts in the best and in the worst fields of life.

You may be easily deceived.

Don't think that you are too wise to be victimized.

Go slowly in cultivation of business and social associates.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

By Thought

THOUGHT makes sunless hours bright,
Weaves its fabric of delight
Into golden veils to spread
Over scenes when joy has fled
Till each aspect is transformed,
Every light and shadow warmed.
Thoughts are forces that can change
Commonplace to fair and strange,
Poor and weak to rich and strong,
Discord into matchless song.
Every marvel may be wrought
By the magic wand of thought,
Which through all the universe
Waves of gladness can disperse.
Fashion, then, your world anew
By the thinking that you do!

Isn't It So?

A brute is merely a man who refuses to flatter a woman.

Like a plain woman, a plain duty is naturally least attractive.

Any married man knows the difference between a reason and an excuse.

When it comes to raw material, nothing is quite so valuable as experience.

There is nothing that makes some people so tired as to see a busy man at work.

Spoiled children get over it, but they have to grow up and leave home to do it.

In spite of the fact theories seldom work, unemployment is far from being a theory.

Great Passages from the Bible

"Wisdom Giveth Life"

(Ecclesiastes 7: 12-22)

FOR wisdom is a defence, and money is a defence: but the excellency of knowledge is, that wisdom giveth life to them that have it.

Consider the work of God: for who can make that straight, which he hath made crooked?

In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider: God also hath set the one over against the other, to the end that man should find nothing after him.

All things have I seen in the days of my vanity: there is a just man that perisheth in his righteousness, and there is a wicked man that prolongeth his life in his wickedness.

Be not righteous over much; neither make thyself over wise: why shouldest thou destroy thyself?

Be not over much wicked, neither be thou foolish: why shouldest thou die before thy time?

It is good that thou shouldest take hold of this; yea, also from this withdraw not thine hand: for he that feareth God shall come forth of them all.

Wisdom strengtheneth the wise more than ten mighty men which are in the city.

For there is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not.

Also take no heed unto all words that are spoken; lest thou hear thy servant curse thee:

For oftentimes also thine own heart knoweth that thou thyself likewise hast cursed others.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

A NEW preacher has a pretty hard time of it, I reckon, getting acquainted and hoping that everybody will like him. Anyway, people all try to get out of him what his ideas are on everything, and whether he'll join Rotary or Kiwanis.

There was a new preacher just come from the East to a job in an up-and-coming Western town, and he was full of pep. He made a speech before the Chamber of Commerce about the needs of the town, and offered to work for nothing for the Chamber in getting all these things.

After the speech one of the parishioners come around and says, "Now, Mr. Cameron, what do you think of evolution?"

"Well," he says, right off, "I think it's good as far as it goes, but mighty slow. We've got to have something more up-to-date and snappy in this town."

Silenced

A MAN went into a barber's shop, sat down, and said, "Cut my hair, please."

After a while the assistant began the usual talk about baldness and lotions.

"I'm trying to go bald," said the customer. "It's my ambition."

The assistant was dumbfounded.

"If ever you change your mind," he said, "come to us. I never heard of a man going bald on purpose."

"I take stuff to hasten it on," said the customer.

"Well," said the assistant, reaching for a bottle, "this is the lotion to ask for if you repent. It's called—"

"Oh, that!" exclaimed the customer, "Why, that's the stuff I take to make me bald. It works wonders."

He was lying, but it stopped the assistant's chatter.—London Tit-Bits.

Safety First

AS HE was about to leave the house, Mrs. Moore rushed up to her husband and reminded him that they were having a few friends in to dinner.

Moore immediately grabbed all the umbrellas from the hall-stand and pushed them into his wife's arms.

"Here, my dear," he said, "hide them!"

"Good heavens, Herbert!" exclaimed the woman. "Do you imagine that our friends are likely to steal them?"

"No," came the reply; "but they might recognize them!"—London Answers.

Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 7.—As a guest of Tom Mix we attended the opening of the Plantation Restaurant at Culver City, where Roscoe Arbuckle is the owner and master of ceremonies. It is the most recent effort of the former comedian to re-establish himself.

Ill luck has dogged him relentlessly since the episode that resulted in his retirement from the screen. Arbuckle retains his avoirdupois, but he has aged and his manner is sedate. He is no longer the apple-cheeked boy that convulsed a nation.

He has acquired a polish along with dignity and there was the "Laugh Clown Laugh" theme when he executed one of his rough and tumble falls for the benefit of his customers. The waiters were all 200-pounders and wore the country boy costumes Fatty wore in his hey-dey.

The big colonial foyer was piled high with floral tributes—one a replica in roses of the overalls he wore and the gift of Mabel Normand, who romped with him through many hilarious comedies. Every screen star of note in Hollywood was present with ears pinned back and hair well larded.

And if their hosannahs is a criterion, the future of Arbuckle as a restaurateur is assured. When Arbuckle walked to the center of the dance floor after a $10-a-plate dinner had been served, the roof was almost lifted by cheers. And some eyes were moist.

Hollywood's attitude is that Arbuckle has paid the price. He made a brief and well chosen speech of thanks. After a few cabaret acts, the affair became extremely informal. Arbuckle, Buster Keaton, Al St. Johns and Mix essayed headspins, flipflops and funny falls.

Jack Pearl and Arbuckle indulged in amusing face-slapping exercises. A waiter hurled a custard pie with a resounding squash. Tom Mix looked the other way when Keaton made a high dive for his outstretched arms. Low comedy at its depths, and yet somehow through it all was a Punchinello note of sadness—the clown who cannot laugh.

Los Angeles often awakens to dull leaden skies and you turn to spit or something and the sun pops out in fullest splendor. The natives when they have to speak of it call it a "high fog." This haze is usually evaporated by 9 a. m.

Having enjoyed both the winter and summer climate, my preference is for the latter. The hottest days are in no way comparable to the average hot day in New York, and as the sun sinks there is a clinging chill often necessitating heavy wraps.

Weather as a topic of conversation has cluttered up countless columns in funny papers. And yet it is the natural result of a place offering such a marvelous climate. Even the outlander, after a few days, finds himself discussing it with enthusiasm. You don't know why; you just get that way.

Real estate salesmen are not displaying the zeal of a year ago. Los Angeles did not relish their bulldog tactics and the discouragement had a quieting effect. The average hotel patron would receive about 10 letters and as many telephone calls a day. Automobiles and buses waited at the door to escort you to this sub-division and that. Los Angeles desires a steady, healthy growth, and is getting it.

The city has many jobless, but most of them are chronic drifters who float from job to job wherever they are. The salubrious climate draws them here, living is cheap, and thus they become a part of the economic question mark every big city faces.

There is a cafe where a reading of tea grounds is included in the prix fixe. One of the predictions the fortune teller usually makes is, "I see you driving a larger car." That's always a safe one, because getting a larger car is one of life's major ambitions out here.

While waiting at a Hollywood curb in a motor today an official looking gentleman pointed at a fireplug and inquired sarcastically if I knew anything about parking laws. I didn't tell him, but half the time I don't know what month it is.

Vacations

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

All over the world people are coming back from their vacations. Some of them have exerted themselves so strenuously that the main thing they need after a vacation is a rest.

A strange idea is that you can rest a tired brain by overexerting an untrained body.

Some people play round after round of golf, others swim too often or too long, others take far too strenuous exercise in walking or bicycling.

Extensive automobile trips are very trying to the nerves and often leave one exhausted.

The idea in a vacation is to change the kind of exercise of our bodies and brains.

If we have been working strenuously with our brain, it is an excellent vacation to loaf and do nothing. It does not always rest us to over-exercise with our body.

Contrariwise those who have been engaged in too strenuous bodily work should pay more attention to their brain work in a vacation.

The truest recreation is to stop the tension, whatever it is, and give one's organisms time to even themselves up, and use those faculties that have been neglected.

Too much sightseeing results often in mental fatigue, and we soon tire of it.

Vacationing, as well as work, needs planning. It should send us back to our task refreshed and full of happy memories of the vacation time.

If we come back to our work tired and fagged out, our recreation has done us little good.

It is a wise man who knows how to divert himself without exhaustion.

Probably the best vacation is carefully doing nothing and giving body and brain a chance to rest up.

When we are doing nothing all our faculties are recuperating, and afterwards we are ready to attack our work with new vigor.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

WOMEN who are undergoing operations to have fat sliced off, and dieting until they are thoroughly miserable, will be glad to hear about Ruth Rekasus. She lives in Chicago, is 38 and weighs 350 pounds. A man fell so desperately in love with her that he had her sign papers after which he told her she was now divorced and could marry him.

So she did, and now she is in court charged with bigamy.

Ruth's mother weighs 260 and her father 475. They have always been happily married and were in court with their daughter.

Ruth couldn't even read, or she wouldn't have signed the papers.

It does look as if Cupid didn't give a hang about anything any more.

The girls who make the best wives are comfortably corpulent. Men are never afraid to marry a fat woman. Every excess pound is an added guarantee as to disposition.

The thin ones look better in their clothes, and the men like to parade them, but married life is anything BUT a parade.

A fat wife never sits up late worrying and then meets you with a barrage of irritating expressions when you return home. She goes to bed and, what's more, she goes to sleep. That's why she is fat.

Some men discussing thin women agreed that the only objection they had to fat was when it was accompanied by laziness and an indifference toward dressing becomingly.

If the vote were left to the world's infants, they would declare unanimously in favor of the fat mammas. There is no crooning sweet enough, and no arms loving enough, to make up for the discomfort of a bony cradle.

The chief excuse given by women who are trying to get thinned out is that they look younger. While, as a matter of fact, a little tendency to plumpness takes years off the appearance of a middle-aged anybody.

The woman who makes all fat women undesirable is the one who queers the game by eating banquets at every sitting, who nibbles sweets in between meals, shouts for more whipped cream, talks food incessantly, and is never willing to do anything or go anywhere if effort is involved. A woman who would rather eat ravenously than be trim in figure, is a physical, mental, spiritual dud.

Constance Vaughan, English novelist, says that women are not beautiful. They only want to be and have resorted to artificial means to get that way until they look hardly human.

She recommends that women be themselves and then declares that what is beautiful is men.

But it's the men you see standing around the stage doors waiting for the "artificial" ones to come forth. And, as for arraying a male in glass beads and ostrich feathers and expecting the box office to bring results—don't make us laugh!

Women ARE beautiful! Men are merely rich!
